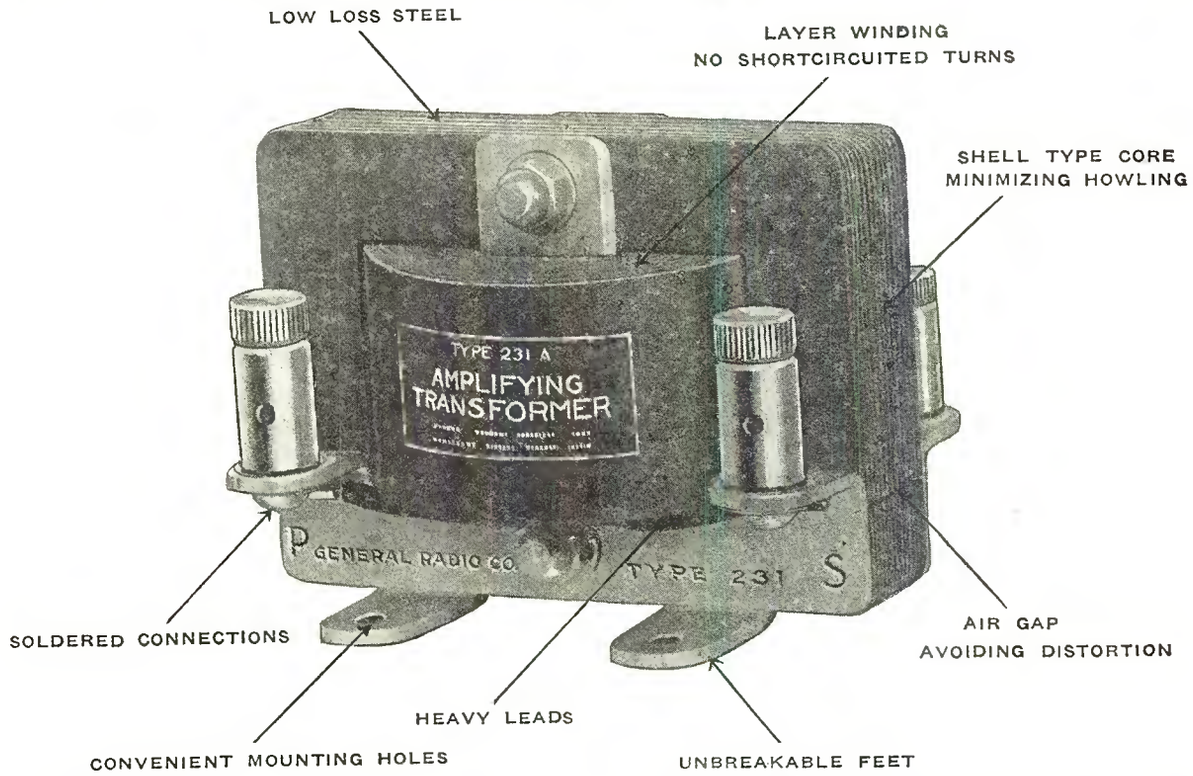
NEUTRODYNE OR SUPERHETERODYNE



Neutrodyne, superheterodyne, and similar sensitive circuits require low loss parts in their construction to obtain full advantage of their sensitivity. The whole value of the circuit will be lost if the audio frequency amplification is inefficient. The General Radio Co. Type 231-A audio frequency amplifying transformer has been designed to give the maximum of quality amplification to the signals detected by supersensitive circuits.

Long wavelength and superheterodyne circuits require carefully designed, medium frequency transformers. Such transformers must be carefully designed and not be merely adaptations of audio or radio frequency transformers. The best in medium frequency transformer design is incorporated in the Type 271.

Type 231A—Audio Frequency Transformer $5.00
Type 271 —Medium Frequency Transformer $5.00

With the Editor

AGAIN we went over the top with a 50% increase in our circulation and were completely sold out, weeks in advance of this new edition.

FROM all parts of the country come letters of commendation for the CITIZENS RADIO CALL BOOK. We appreciate these letters, because it prompts us to greater efforts.

OVER 150,000 people purchased the last edition. From present indications, we will have the largest circulation of any Radio publication in a very short space of time.

WE want our readers to use the circuit section of our Book. Many practical and good circuits are yours for the building and you are missing lots of fun if you don't try your hand at construction.

AGAIN we say "watch for each issue of the CALL BOOK." Tell others about it, for we will be untiring in our efforts to see that every radio enthusiast is a patron of the Citizens Radio Call Book.

You Can Build With Confidence When You Demand This Trade Mark

Radio men of experience agree that more sets are ruined by careless buying than by careless construction. Most people take pains to see that diagrams are followed faithfully—that connections are tight—and instruments are properly placed. But this alone cannot assure results—the poor design of one single part can destroy the efficiency of the most elaborate set. Radio parts must be purchased with a knowledge of their maker—it is the only measure of their quality of which the average buyer can be certain.

A Complete Line of Radio Current Control Apparatus by the Most Famous Electrical Control Engineers

For more than a quarter of a century the name Cutler-Hammer has been demanded by engineers throughout the world in their specifications on current control. Gliding under the sea on the delicate apparatus of submarines; shooting skyward on the operator's handle of the modern office building elevator; keeping day and night watch over thousands of automatic industrial machines—in every branch of industry and in every country in the world you will find this famous trade mark justifying the confidence with which it was demanded. In radio it affords an easy way to be sure of quality in the parts you buy; demand it and build with satisfaction.

Your Condenser Makes a Difference

Pick Up Those Distant Stations Louder and Clearer. Eliminate Noise and Interference. Get More Pleasure Out of Your Receiving With

ELGIN
Precision
Condensers

Precision and Radio

If you are experienced in building radio receiving sets, you know the necessity for good and accurately made parts. If you are starting your first set, you will profit by the experience of others.

The Elgin Tool Works, Inc., established 1900, has been engaged in the manufacture of precision lathes and other special machinery requiring the finest kind of workmanship. We are trained in working to thousandths of an inch.

In perfecting ELGIN Precision Condensers, we have followed the same care as in our other work. How good, rather than how cheap, has been our guide. Holes in the condensers are drilled, then reamed, because reaming, while it costs more makes for accuracy.

In Radio, as in few other fields, careful work is necessary. It is hard at best to get good results in receiving. Delicate adjustments must be made.

ELGIN Precision Condensers are built to give you satisfaction. Each is fully guaranteed.

Try the ELGIN and notice the difference.

ELGIN Precision Condensers

Made in both plain and vernier types, of the highest quality material and workmanship.

Plates are specially hard rolled aluminum, of uniform thickness throughout. Uniformly spaced.

End plates are made of Celoron which makes for efficient dielectric and great tensile strength.

Stops are provided for minimum and maximum capacities.

Terminal leads, mounting screws and template, with instructions for mounting come with each condenser.

3" diameter composition dials 50c extra.

Plates	Capacity		Plain	Vernier
3	.000063	M. F.	$1.75
11	.00025	M. F.	2.40	$4.00
17	.00035	M. F.	2.75
23	.0005	M. F.	3.00	4.50
43	.001	M. F.	4.00	5.50

A feature of the ELGIN Vernier Type Condenser is the adjustable vernier shaft which makes it possible to use the condenser on any thickness of panel and with dials of different thicknesses.

Eveready gives you the right battery for every radio use!

EACH Eveready Radio Battery represents thirty years of battery building experience. Each Eveready Battery represents millions of dollars invested in men, methods and machinery. Overseeing Eveready production is the greatest battery laboratory known to science, where every particle of raw material is required to pass Eveready's exacting tests. To insure Eveready serviceability, batches of Eveready Batteries are constantly being set aside for performance tests. And, finally, daily shipments keep dealers supplied with fresh Eveready Batteries, packed full of power.

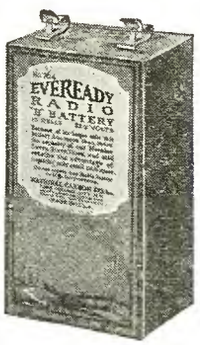
To be certain of battery satisfaction, insist on Eveready Radio Batteries—they last longer.

EVEREADY Radio Batteries

—they last longer

The radio dry cell triumphant

For economical, satisfactory radio, light the filaments of your dry cell tubes with the Eveready Dry Cell Radio "A" Battery. Will unfailingly outlast any other at ⅛ ampere current. Full instructions for getting this Economical Eighth, on labels and in our booklets. This battery will exceed your expectations in economy and performance.



Equal to all demands

Power flows from your "B" Battery, power that gives life to your head-phones or loud speaker. Some tubes draw more "B" Battery current than others, but whatever the tube or tubes you use, Eveready "B" Batteries will give you maximum results. Eveready "B" Batteries are made in six sizes, for all possible uses. Always use the biggest possible battery, for it contains more energy in proportion to cost, and lasts longer.

This battery is a wonder worker

Eveready's biggest contribution to economical and more satisfying radio is the Eveready "C" Battery, a triple-use, universal battery. It will make the loud speaker respond with a new fullness and naturalness of tone, and save much money by making the "B" Battery last still longer. Connect it with the grids of audio frequency amplifiers and notice the big difference. Can also be used as an "A" Battery for 199-type tubes in portable sets, and as a "B" Battery booster. Eveready Radio Battery No. 771—use it!

FED CORPORATION APPARATUS

An Ideal

When the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation first undertook the manufacture of a receiver embodying the Neutrodyne circuit invented by Professor L. A. Hazeltine, its engineering staff reported the new principle to be an epoch making advance in the Radio art.

They were instructed, as usual, in designing a receiver for broadcast reception, to build the best instrument that skilled engineering and research could devise. They were told, as usual, to disregard the cost under the theory that the discriminating radio public wanted the best and were willing to pay the slightly higher cost that always attends higher quality.

That the master Radio craftsmen in the Freed-Eisemann plant are taxed to their utmost to fill the demand for the great receiver is mute testimony to the correctness of this ideal.

Eisemann Corporation

FREED EISEMANN CORPORATION APPARATUS

That the Model N R 5, five tube, non-reflex Neutrodyne Receiver is the last word in the Radio art, is a compliment paid not only by thousands of enthusiastic amateurs, but by such critics as well known radio engineers, radio editors and experimenters whose experience covers the whole field of modern radio.

The Freed-Eisemann commendatory files are crowded with enthusiastic letters from men whose conclusions are backed by years of Radio experience.

Naturally the supply is limited. No sacrifice of quality will ever be made in this institution to gain quantity production. Trained men build this receiver—not mere assemblers—each of the three hundred men employed in its construction are proud of it—just as they are proud of this organization having been selected as the builders of new receivers for the United States Government. This pride extends itself to every satisfied owner. One man tells another and therein lies the reputation which the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation enjoys.

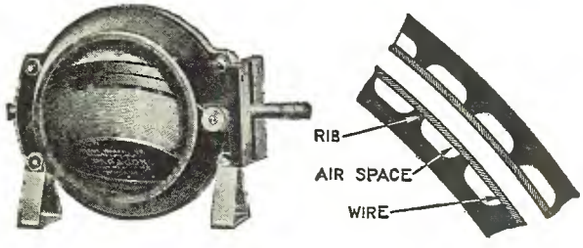
Radio Control

A ship without a rudder merely drifts aimlessly. A radio set that can't be tuned to the program you want to hear is like a ship without a rudder. You can't steer it where you want to go.

The PARAGON RB-2, here illustrated, because of its superior selectivity and sensitivity enables you to choose between broadcasting stations of practically the same signal strength. If you like music, just listen to the musical numbers. If you prefer speeches or talks, listen only to them.

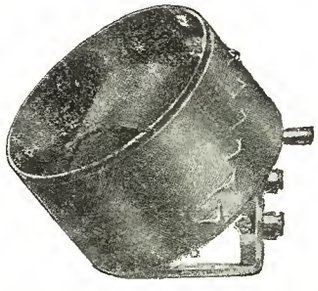
And furthermore, with a PARAGON set you can hear what you tune in on clearly and distinctly without scratching or jamming from beginning to end.

The RB-2 is not only mechanically perfect and beautiful in appearance, but it has a "steering gear" that will take you to the program you want and will reproduce that program with a tone quality that makes listening-in a real pleasure.



Paragon Variometer No. 60

Possesses the ideal advantages of coils surrounded by air and, at the same time, essential mechanical strength. The small clearance between rotor and stator coils gives an inductance ratio of approximately ten to one and a wave length ratio from maximum to minimum setting of about three to one. Price $5.00.



Paragon Variocoupler No. 65

Coils are double silk covered wire wound on moulded, black, Condensite tubes with highly polished finish. Only multiple turn taps are brought out in the primary. Single turn taps and switch for same are unnecessary. Over the lower portion of the coupling range a very fine control is possible. Price $3.50.

THE AMERICAN RADIO RELAY LEAGUE
INCORPORATED.
A MAGAZINE DEVOTED EXCLUSIVELY TO THE WIRELESS AMATEUR.

EXECUTIVE HEADQUARTERS
HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

CABLE ADDRESS
QUIST, HARTFORD

OFFICIAL ORGAN QST
KENNETH B WARNER, EDITOR

Dear Fellow Amateur:

You've heard of the American Radio Relay League - but did you ever stop to think that it is made up of amateurs just like you and that you are eligible to membership in this big association?

It's a fact - the A.R.R.L. is made up of your kind of radio enthusiasts: some of them are "brass-pounders", some experimenters, some students, but all possessed of the keen interest in radio that marks the American and Canadian amateur. Thousands of your fellow "bugs" have combined to form a continent-wide cooperative organization of, by, and for the amateur. You can be a member too, as the only requirement for admission is a BONA-FIDE INTEREST in amateur radio.

When you join the League you throw your weight to the side of organized good government in amateur affairs, and you become a member of the only national amateur society that "does things". The A.R.R.L. represents the interests of the amateurs in legislative affairs, it conducts a headquarters information service for their benefit, it publishes a magazine that monthly brings the latest radio news and developments to the home of each member, and - most interesting and perhaps most important of all - it conducts practical operating tests and relays and stunts that are the joy of every radio amateur. Ever hear of the Transatlantic Tests, or the famous amateur relay from New England to Honolulu and return, or the amateur communication network that is keeping the MacMillan Arctic Expedition in touch with home from its location near the North Pole? Typical A.R.R.L. activities, those, and many more like them scheduled for the next few months. It's worth joining the League to get the A.R.R.L. magazine alone - "QST" is its name, and it's the premier amateur magazine, published exclusively by and for the amateur.

We would be glad to send you a copy of our little booklet, "The Story of the A.R.R.L.", or if you've already seen enough to make you want to be a member, just write a letter of application and enclose $2.00 to cover one year's dues and we will take care of you. That entitles you to a subscription to "QST" during your membership, too.

Sincerely yours,

Hiram Percy Maxim
President

"There's a Radiola

New and Remarkable Radio Achievements in the new Radiolas—

HERE are the new Radiolas—new triumphs of radio research! Intensive study of the problems of radio today—backed by vast engineering resources—has laid bare the needed improvements in radio—and has found the way to these improvements. There was a need for non-radiating receivers. For super selectivity. For more melodious tone reproduction. For dry battery receivers more sensitive for long distance reception. For even simpler operation. And these needs have been met in the new Radiolas. There was a need for a worth while receiver at a popular price. And this need, too, has been met. Thus the Radio Corporation of America fulfills its purpose—bringing together great new discoveries of the foremost inventors—making possible things that seemed impossible in radio. And bringing these newest achievements to every home, with a Radiola for every purse.

FIRST

Radiola Super-VIII. A richly cabineted instrument, supremely selective, receiving over great distances—with no antenna—and no ground wire. It stands as aloof and beautiful as your phonograph. And brings in music and speech through its hidden loudspeaker — loud — clear — perfect in tone. Yet it has but two simple knobs to turn. It is an improved Super-Hetcrodyne, utilizing the second harmonic principle.

SECOND

Radiola X. For the home where the erection of an antenna raiscs no problcm, this Radiola provides selcctivity capable of meeting the requirements in congested broadcasting zones. With local stations operating, you can tune in distant stations without interference—and this with supreme simplicity. Its greatest achievement is the discovery that gives the reproduced voice and music a tone pure and undistorted. It is a "regenoflex" receiver—a vastly improved regenerativc circuit of the non-radiating type.

THIRD

Radiola III. A sensitive two-tube receiver of the antenna type, which permits reception over long distances, or loudspeaker operation on the near stations. It is an improvement in tone and reception over previous two-tube receivers. It actually costs less than it could be made for at home! And with the two-tube balanced (push-pull) amplifier and the Loudspeaker, the beginner can add to his investment as he grows enthusiastic.

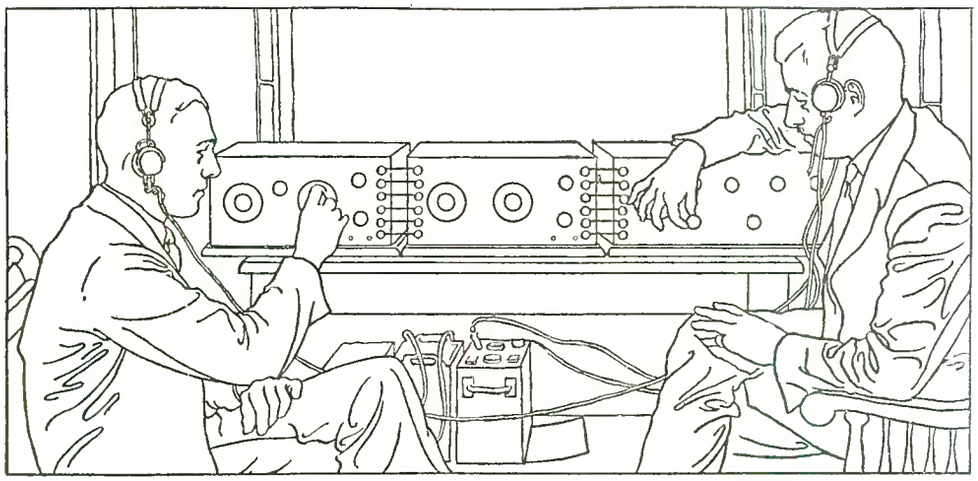
HOW TO BUILD THE NEW REGENERATIVE

Super-Heterodyne Receiver

Courtesy, Popular Radio

COST OF PARTS: ABOUT $100.00

RECEIVING RANGE: UP TO 3,400 MILES



THE TWO DESIGNERS DEMONSTRATE THEIR EXPERIMENTAL SET

The new receiver consists of three parts in separate cabinets. The tuner at the left is being operated by Mr. Haynes, the builder of the set; the oscillator is in the center and the amplifier at the right is being adjusted by Mr. Cockaday.

HERE ARE THE ITEMS YOU WILL NEED—

(K2, K3, and K4)—Haynes-Griffin special oscillator coupler;
K1—knob and dial, 3 inch;
L—Fett and Kimmel Micro-tube variable condenser, .0005 mfd.;
L1—knob and dial, 3 inch;
M—Fada panel mounting socket;
N—filament rheostat, 20-30 ohms;
O—Micadon fixed condenser, .005 mfd.;
P1 to P12—binding posts;
Q—composition panel;
R—cabinet.

THE super-heterodyne receiver is the most sensitive receiver yet developed. If it is properly designed it is also the most selective. Its one drawback, heretofore, has been its complexity—complexity of construction and operation. This and the fact that the amateur and broadcast listener cannot afford such a costly piece of apparatus as it has been up to this time has kept the super-heterodyne from gaining the popularity that it justly should have received.

However, the super-heterodyne (or any other type of set) must have the following qualities before it can ever be acclaimed by the multitude as a really popular circuit.

1. It must be selective.
2. It must be sensitive.
3. It must be easy to construct.
4. It must be inexpensive.
5. It must be easy to operate.
6. It must be economical from an "A" battery standpoint.

Although the super-heterodyne meets the first two points better than any other known type, it has always been termed the "Rolls-Royce" of radio. But, beside being the most selective and sensitive it was also complicated, expensive, and could not be built by any but the most experienced engineers. It has always imposed a heavy strain on the "A" battery on account of the large number of tubes necessary to take advantage of its extraordinary amplifying powers. These factors have kept it, up to the present time, as the "lord of all radio receivers," but unfortunately they have also limited its use to a chosen few who have had the price, the ability and the patience to master its complications.

The author of this article has long realized the possibilities of this wonderful circuit and he has, for a period of six months, devoted much time to research for the purpose of developing a simplified super-heterodyne that is worthy of the name.

Of course, with the new low-filament-consumption vacuum tube such as the C-301-A and the UV-201-A, the set can now be made efficient as far as "A" battery loading is concerned.

It is now possible to burn four tubes with less filament current than one tube would have taken a year ago.

This fact covers the point raised in the 6th requirement specified at the head of this article.

The circuit as finally evolved (and as will be described in this article) has only two operating controls; for this reason it really is simple to operate (Point No. 5.)

The circuit has been so simplified and the parts used so reduced to essentials, that it is relatively inexpensive. (Point No. 4.)

In its final form the set is really simple to construct. (Point No. 3.) It can be built in units. This places the super-heterodyne right where it ought to be as the ultimate in radio-reception apparatus but within the reach of anyone who is ordinarily handy with tools and who can afford to experiment with radio at all.

Some of the new features incorporated into the design of the set which make it so suitable for DX reception over wavelengths between 180 and 600 meters are:

The use of the first tube as a radio-frequency amplifier.

The use of a heterodyne oscillator coupled to the plate circuit of the first tube (instead of to the grid circuit as is usual).

The use of a new type of air-core, radio-frequency transformer which is sharply tuned to a wavelength of 3,000 meters.

The use of regeneration in the radio frequency amplifier (which greatly boosts up signal strength without complicating the control).

The elimination of the variable-tuned circuits at the input of the radio-frequency amplifier.

The reduction af the tuning controls to two knobs, one for the wavelength and one for the heterodyne oscillator.

The successful use of regeneration in the first-tube circuit.

The use of the Haynes circuit for tuning.

The use of the new thoriated-filament vacuum tubes throughout (six tubes).

The use of a new oscillation coupler for the oscillator.

The set is constructed in three parts; the tuner, the oscillator, and the radio-frequency amplifier.

The Parts Used in Building the Oscillator

In all the diagrams in this article each part bears a designating letter. In this way the prospective builder of a receiver may easily determine how to mount the instruments in the correct places and connect them properly in the electrical circuit. The same designating letters are used in the text and the list of parts below.

If instruments other than the ones listed are used it will necessitate only the use of different spacing of the holes drilled in the panel and shelf for mounting them.

How to Construct the Oscillator

After procuring all the instruments and materials for building the set, the amateur should set about preparing the panel Q (shown in figures 2, 3, 4 and 5).

First of all the panel should be cut to the correct size, 7 by 15 inches.

Then the edges should be squared up smoothly with a file. The centers for boring the holes (which are necessary for mounting the instrument) should be laid out on the panel as shown in Figure 4.

The holes outlined here with a double circle should be countersunk so that the flat-head machine screws used for fastening the instruments will be flush with the panel. All the rest of the holes in this panel are straight drill holes. Sizes for the diameter of these holes have not been given, but the builder will readily decide what size hole is necessary by measuring the size of the screws and shafts of instruments that have to go through the holes.

When the panel is drilled, it may be given a dull finish by rubbing lengthwise with smooth sandpaper until the surfacc is smooth, then the same process should be repeated except that light machine oil should be applied during the rubbing. The panel should then be rubbed dry with a piece of cheese-cloth, and a dull permanent finish will be the result. Or the panel may bc left with its original shiny-black finish, if care is exercised so that it is not scratched during drilling.

Next, mount the variable condenser L, by means of two screws inserted through the panel as shown in Figures 2, 3, and 5. The dial L1, should then be fastened to the shaft of the condenser by means of a setscrew.

New, fasten the oscillator coupler K, in its correct place (Figures 2, 3 and 5) by a single screw and attach the knob and dial K1. The three windings of the coupler are designed as K2, K3, and K4, but these designations are for wiring up and will be considered later.

An oscillator coupler may be made on two similar sized tubes as the coupler for the Haynes circuit. The larger tube (stator) contains two windings spaced ¼ inch apart. These windings K2 and K3 contain ten turns each of No. 22 DSC wire. The rotor winding K4 has 15 turns of the same size wire.

When this is done, mount the socket M, by two screws fastened through the panel, and mount the rheostat N, just above the socket. The arrangement of these two parts is clearly in Figures 2, 3, and 5.

The fixed condenser O, can be left until the wiring is done as it is to be supported by the connecting wires and does not need to be mounted on the panel.

Now fasten on the binding posts P, as indicated in Figures 2, 3, and 5 by inserting a screw through the panel for each one. The various binding posts are designated in the diagrams by numbers from 1 to 12, but these are only given for ease of identification in wiring. All the bind ing posts are exactly alike.

The dimensions for the cabinet are given in Figure 6. This cabinet may be made by anyone who is handy with carpenter tools, or, the drawing in Figure 6 may bc turned over to a cabinet maker. It should be made of hardwood finished to suit the owner's taste. However, as the cabinet for this set is a standard size, it may be procured from almost any radio store; merely ask for a cabinet for a 7 by 10-inch panel.

How to Wire the Oscillator

The oscillator should be connected up with bus wire in the following manner:

Run a straight piece of tinned copper bus wire from the binding post marked P1 to the post marked P7, as shown in Figure 1. P1 is the top binding post on the left hand side of the panel (looking from the front). P7, is the top binding post on the left hand side of the panel (looking from the front). P7, is the top binding post on the right side of the panel (also looking from the front of the panel).

Next, connect binding post P2, with one end of the rotor winding K4, (of the oscillation coupler K), with a wire and connect the other end of winding K4, with the bind post P8.

Now run a wire from P3, to P9, and also connect another wire to this piece and run it to the inside end of the stator winding K2 (of the coupler K). From the outside end of the winding K2, run a wire direct to the plate terminal of the socket M.

Then run a wire from binding post P4, direct to P5, and from there over to P11, and on to P10. The condenser should now be connected by two bits of wire between P3 and P5.

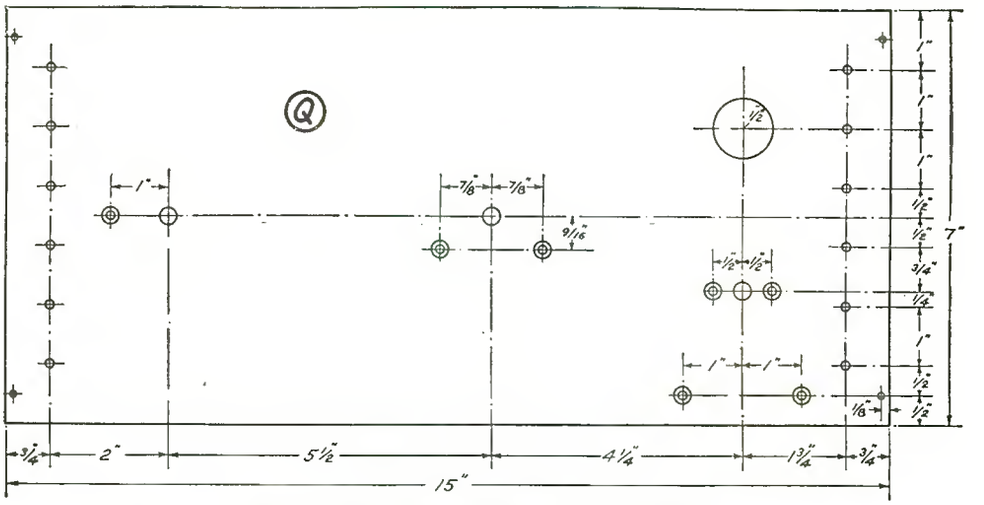
When this has been done, run a wire from P11 to one filament terminal of the socket M, and from the other filament terminal connect a wire to the rheostat N. From the other side of the rheostat a wire should be connected direct to P12.

Now, connect binding posts P6 and P12 with a wire, and run a connection from P6, up to the inside end of the winding K3 (of the coupler K). The other end of the winding K3, should be run to the grid terminal of the socket M.

Finally connect the variable condenser L, between the plate and grid leads (from the socket M), being sure that the rotor plates of the condenser are connected to the plate lead and the stator plates of the condenser are connected to the grid leads as indicated in the wiring diagram in Figue 1.

This completes the wiring.



THE DRILLING PLAN FOR THE PANEL

FIGURE 4: This drawing shows where to drill the holes in the panel for mounting the instruments and attaching the binding posts. The correct spacings are given for the holes. The holes outlined with a double circle should be countersunk.

What the Oscillator Does

Almost every radio fan who operates a regenerative set is familiar with the whistle accompanying reception of a radio-broadcast signal when the detector is oscillating. We know that this is caused by the incoming radio-frequency current combining with the radio-frequency current generated by the vacuum tube when it is allowed to oscillate. However, when the wavelength of the oscillating receiving circuit is varied slightly off the wavelength of the incoming signal, the whistling note heard in the receivers goes up in pitch. In other words, when the frequency of the local oscillations (generated in the receiver) is identical with the frequency of the signals being received, the whistle is not heard. The two sets of oscillations are then in synchronism or in phase with each other.

When the frequency of the local oscillations is varied either up or down, slower or faster than the frequency of the received oscillations, a whistle is heard which starts with a low pitch and gradually increases till it goes way up and up above audibility. The greater the difference in frequency between the local oscillations and the received oscillations, the higher the "beat note" will be. As stated before if we further increase the difference in frequency the note will become inaudible and if it is increased sufficiently a beat will be produced which will have a radio-frequency wavelength of its own. The oscillator (or heterodyne as it is more widely known) does this when used for this purpose. It generates an oscillating, radio-frequency current, the frequency of which can be varied at will, so that it will heterodyne or beat with the incoming signals and produce another signal like the incoming signal, only on a higher wavelength!

In this way the incoming signal can be reproduced on a higher wavelength, in this case 3,000 meters, at which wavelength, radio-frequency amplication can be carried on with enormously greater efficiency than on the original wavelength.

This is the secret of the super-heterodyne; it permits of super-amplification at a radio-frequency by means of a heterodyne.

In the oscillator, just described, the frequency of the local oscillations is varied by rotating the condenser L, by means of the knob L1.

For those who want to own a receiver that will literally reach out to the corners of the earth and pick out a whisper to recreate it into a mighty shout, here is the set to make. Contrary to belief, it really is a simple set to tune.

PART II

Part 1 of this article told how to make the oscillator for the super-heterodyne; it also gave an outline of the salient points of this type of receiver and described what it was and what it would do. Some of the new points involved in the amplifier unit are described in detail in the following article.

COST OF PARTS: ABOUT $40.00

HERE ARE THE ITEMS YOU WILL NEED—

S1 to S4—vacuum-tube sockets;
T1 to T4—four Haynes-Griffin transformers, one input and three radio-frequency transformers, 3,000 meters;
U—Potentiometer, 200 ohms;
V—Filament rheostat, 6 ohms;
W—tubular grid leak, 2 megohms;
X1—Mica condenser, .005 mfd.;
X2—Mica condenser, .00025 mfd.;
X3—Mica condenser, .002 mfd.;
X4—Paper condenser, .5 mfd.;
X5—Paper condenser, .5 mfd.;
Y1 to Y12—binding posts;
Z1—composition panel;
Z2—wooden sub-panel, 6¼x14½ inches.

FIRST of all, when they started work on this set the designers tested out the various makes of transformers for radio frequencies between 2,000 and 6,000 meters. After long experimentation, they decided that there would be a distinct advantage in a transformer which would not involve the use of an iron core. It was decided that they needed a transformer that would be sharply tuned to one particular wavelength to which all incoming signals could be heterodyned.

THE SIDE VIEW OF THE OSCILLATOR

This, of course, would insure much sharper tuning, in the set as a whole, than would be possible with a radio-frequency transformer which responded to signals over a relatively wide band of wavelengths.

After still more experimentation with air-core transformers which were built up with variations in the turn ratios, variations in the fundamental wavelengths, variations in the magnetic coupling, and variations in the resistance of coils (this involved many trials with windings of different size of wire) it was decided to use a transformer that was extremely sharply tuned on 3,000 meters. This was found better than the somewhat higher wavelengths more generally used in super-heterodyne amplifiers in that the possibility of cutting out some of the side bands due to critical tuning was less than at the higher wavelengths. This wavelength also was found to be relatively free from interference. (The reader will note that the authors do not describe how to make these transformers or any other parts of radio apparatus which they consider beyond the scope of the amateur experimenter's handiwork. It is much better that he should buy the parts and be sure of satisfaction in his experiments than that he should waste a lot of time and energy and finally get unsatisfactory results.)

Then there was the consideration of a suitable means for coupling the output circuits of the tuner and the oscillator to the radio-frequency amplifier. In most amplifiers which are broadly tuned, the input circuits is usually tuned fairly sharply by means of two honey-comb coils placed in inductive relation and shunted by two variable condensers. In adjusting such a set the proper coupling had to be found by experiment; then the two condensers had to be adjusted to the best resonance point of the radio-frequency transformers. This of course helped in sharpening up the operation of the set, but it added the adjustments of coupling and double-circuit tuning to the set.

In the amplifier described in this chapter the input transformer is designed with a high step-up voltage ratio; at the same time, by shunting the primary coil with a fixed condenser of the proper capacity, the correct wavelength (corresponding to the wavelength of the other transformers) is automatically adjusted, thus eliminating all the adjustments that have heretofore been regarded as necessary.

The amplifier contains three steps of tuned-radio-frequency amplification which is fixed in wavelength and also the detector (vacuum tube). It is a simple matter to build the unit and it is also a simple matter to operate it. There are only two knobs on the set; a regeneration control (potentiometer) which has to be adjusted only once, and one rheostat which controls the filament of all four tubes.

The Parts Used in Building the Set

In all the diagrams in this article each part bears a designating letter. In this way the prospective builders of a receiver may easily determine how to mount the instruments in the correct places and connect them properly in the electric circuit. The same designating letters are used in the text and the list of parts below.

The list of parts given at the head of this chapter includes the exact instruments used in the particular set from which these specifications were made up; however, there are many other reliable makes of instruments which may be used with equally good results.

If instruments other than the ones listed are used it will necessitate only the use of different spacing of the holes drilled in the panel and shelf for mounting them.

How to Construct the Set

After procuring all the instruments and materials for building the set, the amateur should set about preparing the panel Z1. (shown in Figures 2, 3, 4 and 6).

First of all the panel should be cut to the correct size, 7 by 15 inches.

Then the edges should be squared up smoothly with a file. The centers for boring the holes (which are necessary for mounting the instruments) should be laid out on the panel as shown in Figure 4.

The holes outlined here with a double circle should be countersunk so that the flat-head machine screws used for fastening the instruments will be flush with the panel. All the rest of the holes in this panel are straight drill holes. Sizes for the diameter of these holes have not been given, but the builder will readily decide what size hole is necessary by measuring the size of the screws and shafts of instruments that have to go through the holes.

When the panel is drilled, it may be given a dull finish by rubbing lengthwise with smooth sandpaper until the surface is smooth, then the same process should be repeated except that light machine oil should be applied during the rubbing. The panel should then be rubbed dry with a piece of cheese-cloth, and a dull permanent finish will be the result. Or the panel may be left with its original shiny-black finish, if care is exercised so that it is not scratched during drilling.

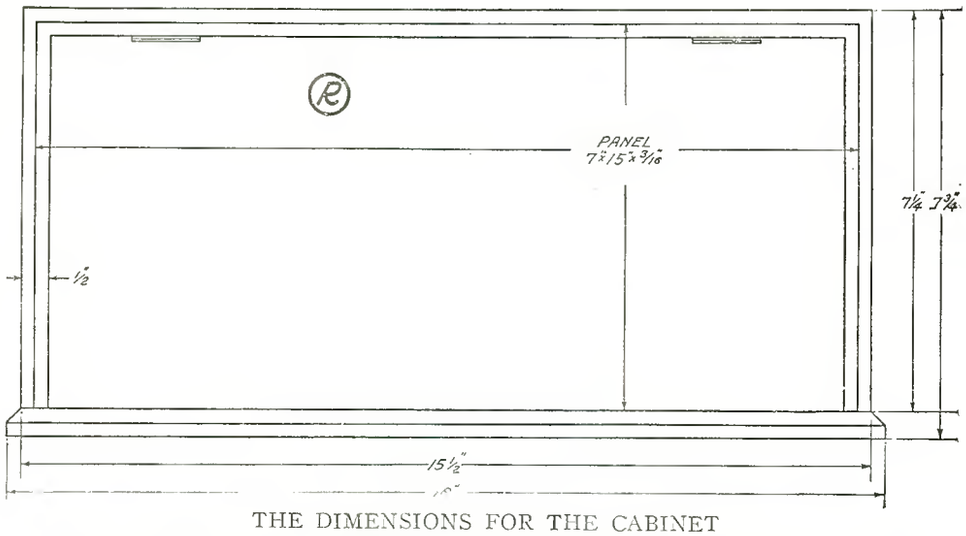
Next the sub-panel Z2, should be cut to the correct size, 6¼ by 14 inches, and painted with a dark insulating paint, and fastened to the main panel Z1, with wood screws running through the face of the main panel and into the edge of the sub-panel. (See Figures 4 and 6.)

Now mount the potentiometer U on the main panel with two screws, and likewise the filament rheostat V, as shown in Figure 6.

Next, screw the four sockets S1, S2, S3, and S4 to the sub-panel Z2 by means of two brass screws to each socket. Secure the two paper condensers in a similar manner, X4 between the sockets S1 and S2, and X5 between the sockets S3 and S4. (See Figures 3 and 6.)

Mount the input transformer T1, as shown in Figure 6, by a single brass woodscrew, and do the same thing similarly with the radio-frequency transformers T2, T3, and T4.



THE DIMENSIONS FOR THE CABINET

FIGURE 6: This diagram (which contains the front and side measurements for the hardwood cabinet) may be turned over for construction to the cabinet maker or a cabinet of this size may be obtained from almost any radio supply store.

These transformers are wound in two slots cut out of a piece of hardwood. The core for the windings should be ⅝ inch in diameter. The slots for the primary and the secondary windings should be ¼ inch wide and the two slots separated by a distance of ⅛ inch. For the input transformer wind, on the primary, 300 turns of No. 36 DSC wire. For the secondary wind 1,000 turns of the same size of wire. For the other three transformers, wind, on the primary, 850 turns of No. 36 DSC wire and for the secondary wind on 1,000 turns.

As the three condensers X1, X2 and X3 are supported by the wiring they may be left until the set is connected up. The condenser X2 should be of the type of micadon that has two clips for mounting the grid leak directly upon it.

Now mount and fasten, with screws on the rear of the panel, the twelve binding posts Y1 to Y12, in two vertical lines of six each, one line at one end of the panel and one line at the other. These binding posts should be fastened in the proper holes drilled for them in the main panel Z1.

A standard cabinet may be obtained for the amplifier; just ask for a 7 x15-inch cabinet.

The construction work is now completed.

How to Wire the Amplifier

The amplifier should be connected up with bus wire in the following manner:

Connect one end of the primary coil of the transformer T1 with binding post Y1. (Posts Y1 to Y6 are located on the left-hand end of the panel, looking from the front and posts Y7 to Y12 are located at the right-hand end of the panel, also looking from the front. The wiring diagram in Figure 1 should be reversed if you figure out the connections from the back of the panel.)

The other end of the primary coil should be connected to post Y2 and the condenser X1 should be connected directly across the primary wires of the transformer.

Next connect three separate wires straight across from post Y3 to Y9, from Y5 to Y11 and from Y6 to Y12. Then connect posts Y4 and Y5 together and connect posts Y10 and Y11 together, with short bits of the bus wire.

The next job will be to connect potentiometer U across the two wires connecting Y5 to Y11 and Y6 to Y12. The mid-connection on the potentiometer should be connected to one side of the condenser X4 and one end of the secondary of T1, T2 and T3. The remaining end of T1 secondary winding should be connected to the grid terminal of the socket S1. Likewise with the remaining end of the secondary windings of T2 and T3; they should be connected to the grid terminals of sockets S2 and S3, respectively.

Now connect the remaining side of condenser X4 to the bottom wire attached to post Y6.

Then connect the condenser X5 across Y3 and Y6 binding posts, anywhere suitable along the two long wires connecting these two posts to posts Y9 and Y12, respectively.

Now connect condenser X3 across post Y7 and Y12.

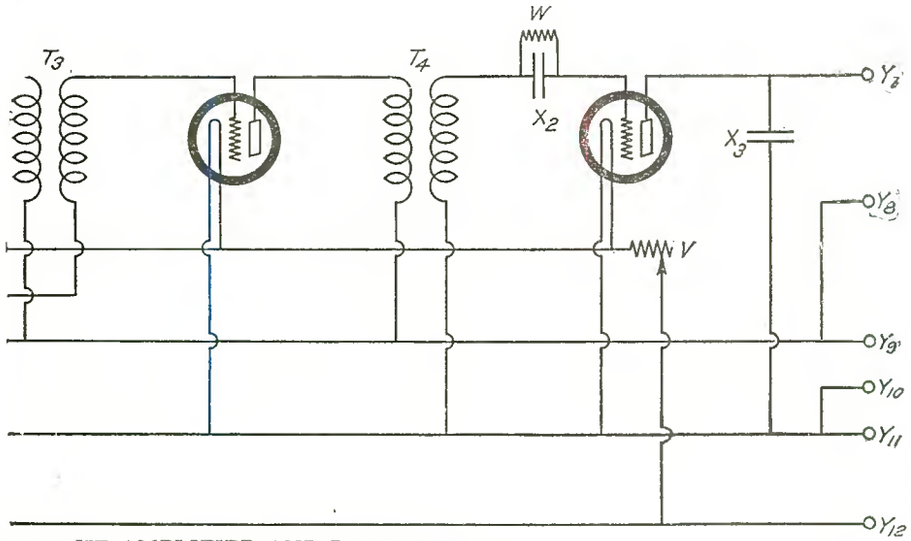
Run a wire from Y12 to the pointer on the rheostat V. The other end of the rheostat should be connected to one of the filament terminals on each of the sockets S4, S3, S2 and S1. The remaining filament terminals on these four sockets should all be connected to the long wire connecting posts Y5 and Y11. From this same wire run another wire to one end of the secondary winding of the transformer T4. The other end of this winding should be connected direct to one side of the condenser X2 and the grid leak W. The other side of these two instruments should be connected to the grid terminal of the socket S4.

Connect the plate terminal of the socket S1 to one end of the primary winding of transformer T2. The other end of the primary T2 should be connected to the long wire connecting posts Y3 and Y9.

Do the same thing with the plate terminal of socket S2 and the primary winding of transformer T3.

Do the same thing with the plate terminal of socket S3 and the primary winding of transformer T4.

The last wiring job will be to connect the plate terminal of socket S4 to post Y7 and the hook-up will be complete.



FOR THE AMPLIFIER AND DETECTOR

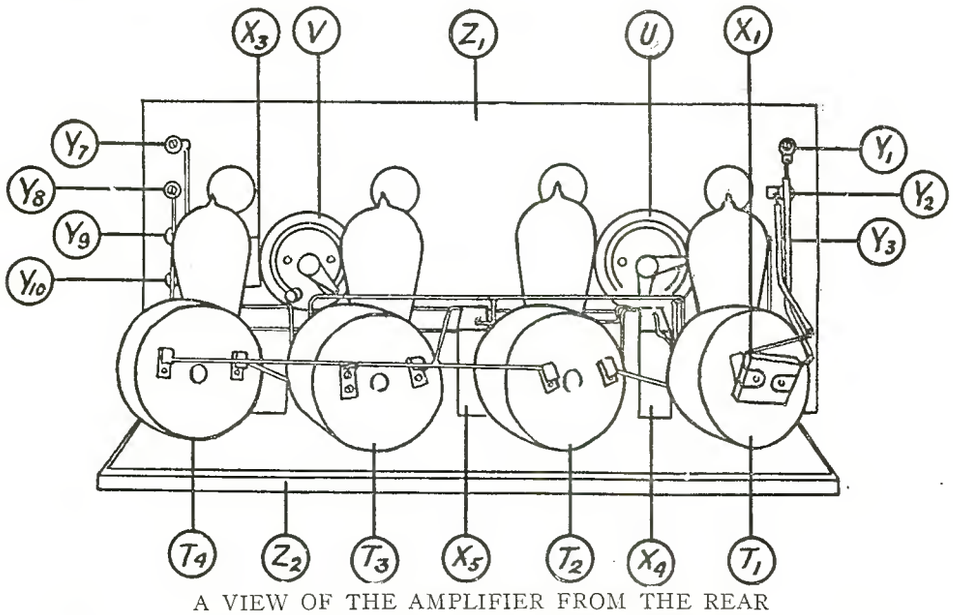
menter may be sure of obtaining the proper connections for letters that appear in the other diagrams and the text.

Operating Data

To set up the various units after they have been completed and put in their cabinets is a simple matter.

First, place the Haynes tuning unit at the left-hand side of the table and next to it, on the right, place the oscillator. Then, at the right of the oscillator, place the amplifier unit that you have just completed. You may also place the two-stage audio-frequency amplifying unit at the right of the radio-frequency unit if a terrific signal is required—but this is not recommended by the author.

As all the cabinets are of the same size and finish they make a neat businesslike appearance.



A VIEW OF THE AMPLIFIER FROM THE REAR

Now, just bridge across from one binding post on one unit to the binding post opposite it on the next unit as they stand together. This will give you six connections between the tuner and the oscillator unit, six between the oscillator unit and the radio-frequency amplifier unit, and so on.

Now, to connect the batteries and phones, do the following:

Connect the positive "A" battery to the post Y12 on the amplifier unit.

Connect the negative "A" battery to the post Y11 on the amplifier unit.

Connect the negative "B" battery to the post Y10 on the amplifier unit.

Connect the positive "B" battery to the post Y9 on the amplifier unit.

Connect one terminal of the telephones to the post Y8 on the amplifier unit.

Connect the remaining terminal of the telephones to post Y7.

Connect the antenna and ground to the two left-hand posts on the tuner.

All the other units will then be automatically connected to the batteries and to each other.

Next, place in the socket six UV-201-a vacuum tubes, making sure before doing so that the rheostats in all the units are turned off.

Put the receivers on your head, but not too near your ears, and turn up the tubes to the correct brilliancy.

Then start with the initial adjustment. Place the regenerative control knob A1 on the tuner at a low value (say at 10). Place the oscillator-coupler knob K1 at a high value (near 100). Place the antenna switch F1 on the second tap from the left. Set the wavelength knob B1 at 40. Place the heterodyne control knob L1 at about 40. Then adjust the potentiometer knob on the amplifier, by turning in a clockwise motion until a loud rushing noise is heard in the telephones. Turn the potentiometer just a little further on beyond this point.

The initial adjustment is finished, now to tune in a station.

Turn the heterodyne adjusting knob L1 slowly in one direction or the other until you hear a signal. Then bring in the signal louder by adjusting with the wavelength knob A1. (These are the two knobs that you will use altogether for tuning; A1 to tune to wavelength and L1 to heterodyne the signals).

When you have these two adjustments made the best you can get them, start and go over all the other adjustments you have already made and thus get the set working, once and for all, at the highest efficiency.

When this is once done, you need not bother with the other adjustments again; they are only necessary to get the set working properly.

To get other stations, you may change the setting of A1 and find the corresponding setting for L1 to bring in this wavelength. You will find that for a given setting on A1 there will be a given setting on L1.

The regenerative control should only be used on extremely distant stations where it will be found a great help in making the signals audible.

When you have mastered the tuning method, you will find that you can tune in anything, no matter what the distance, if the wavelength is within the range of tuner (180 to 550 meters) and if the static is not too strong.

You will find little interference and great sensitivity in such a set and the reception will be extraordinarily clear.

From North Pole to Avalon

Thordarson transformers again move the ether. McMillan's arctic ship, the Bowdoin, established a new distance transmission record when it worked with station 6XAD at Avalon, off the Catalina Islands. The Bowdoin transmitter is only 100 watts but uses a Thordarson ½ KW 500 cycle, 3000 volt divided secondary plate supply transformer.

The engineers who designed the Bowdoin's radio equipment accepted only the most efficient and trustworthy equipment obtainable. Donald Mix, W N P's operator, is constantly proving the wisdom of their choice.

Amateurs everywhere are attesting the merits of Thordarson transmission equipment, and we have received many letters of commendation from our satisfied "ham" friends.

Many broadcasting stations, such as WJAZ, WDAP, are using Thordarson transformers in their transmitters.

We maintain a service department for amateurs. Bring your transformer questions to us. We will gladly answer them.

The Jewell Trio

The reputation of Jewell instruments in the radio industry has been largely built around this "Trio" of instruments. While we have developed several new instruments, such as our No. 90 wavemeter and No. 95 complete radio test set, these three instruments have made the name Jewell known by practically every radio amateur in the United States and Canada, and we enjoy a very nice export business in Europe, Australia, Argentine, Brazil and Mexico.

Accuracy — Reliability — Uniformity

We were the first, and even to this day, we are the only instrument manufacturer making Direct Current, Alternating Current and Thermo Couple type instruments in the same uniform size cases for flush panel mounting. The accuracy and substantial construction of Jewell instruments is universally recognized and our low prices have, of course, added to their popularity.

Every radio experimenter should have a copy of our Radio Booklet No. 14-A, in which we show diagram hook-ups for our different type instruments.

HERE is the condenser you have been waiting for. It combines the highest in electrical efficiency with the greatest mechanical durability. It is a condenser that you will be anxious to build into the new set. The stations it will bring in and the way it will bring them in will increase your regard for it the longer you own it. Its life is indefinite.

The Flewelling Type R Condenser is not high priced. Consider its useful life and the fact that it is as close to a laboratory instrument as is possible to get in commercial production. Its electrical characteristics place it at the top of the list. The novice can appreciate its mechanical superiority at a glance. Its heavy $\frac{1}{16}$ inch brass plates will stand considerable banging around without disturbance of alignment. Large ball bearings insure freedom from binding action in turning rotor. Ruggedness of construction insures its long life.

The condenser is the most important element in your set. You are most dependent on it for tuning efficiency. It is a poor place to use cheap material if you want good results. The more condensers in your hook-up the more important it becomes that they are all of high electrical efficiency. Use Flewelling Parts and note the difference.

Why attempt to save a few cents on a socket when you can get perfection in the Flewelling Socket? Lowest capacity losses between contacts owing to wide spacing. Best type of wiping contact insuring firm, quiet connections. Moulded Bakelite in a most efficient design. Ask to see one and note its superiority.

The Flewelling Type S Tuner makes use of the efficient basket weave winding with a micrometer control of the coupling. So efficient is the tuner that when used in conjunction with a good condenser it is possible to cover the entire broadcasting wave band without changing coils or using taps. The efficiency of this tuner can be judged by the fact that with a 15 turn coil or less as tuning inductance it is possible to receive considerably below 100 meters. The small amount of dielectric used makes this type of tuner quite efficient.

All Flewelling parts are made under the personal supervision of Mr. E. T. Flewelling, the radio engineer who invented the super-circuit bearing his name.

Amplify the MODERN way!

"Push-Pull" Amplifying Transformers

for those who demand more than has heretofore been secured from audio frequency amplification. Used in addition to one or two stages of audio.

When used as a second stage, quality of tone is considerably clarified with no perceptible increase in volume, but with distortion due to harmonics entirely eliminated. Used as third stage, tone and quality of reproduction are not only improved but amplification is also greatly increased.

Two Modern "Push-Pull" Transformers and two standard amplifier tubes, preferably of UV-201-A or C-301-A type are necessary for one stage of "Push-Pull" amplification. This is used in connection with a one or two-stage standard audio frequency amplifier. For the most satisfactory operation a separate "B" battery of 90 to 112 volts is used. All information and wiring diagrams sent upon request. Price $12.50 per set of two (2).

If your jobber or dealer can't supply you, write us giving his name.

Modern Reflex and Standard Audio Transformers are also made in 4 to 1 and 10 to 1 ratio. The 4 to 1 is recommended for use for 2-stage amplifier. The 10 to 1 is especially recommended for all reflex circuits where a higher secondary reactance helps maintain the equilibrium in the circuit necessary for effective operation. The audibility amplification curves of these transformers are practically flat. Modern Standard Transformers are guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. Can be used with all standard tubes.

REFLEX
10 to 1 Ratio
For use in all reflex circuits using crystal detector.
Price.....$5.50

"I recently purchased your Modern Transformers, Nos. 112 and 113, for Push-Pull amplification, and I am pleased to say that, for volume and clearness of tone, it cannot be beat. It is also a bear for D. X. I am using this in conjunction with a home-made Standard Regenerative, three-tube circuit. I heartily recommend it."

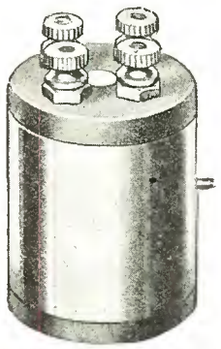
UNITED

RADIO PARTS spell success!



"United" Radio Frequency Transformer $2.50

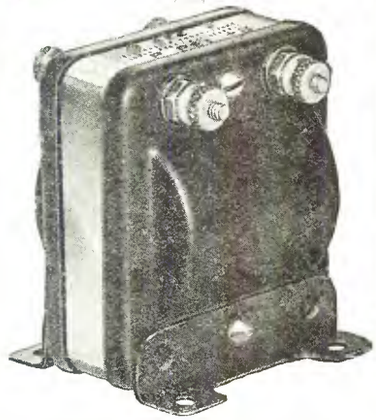
When the United Radio Engineers designed the United Radio Frequency Unit they took a big step forward in the Radio Industry. United Radio Parts have long been noted for their originality of design and their high standard of quality and workmanship.

The Radio Frequency unit consists of a standard vacuum tube, a standard tube locked in the base of which is mounted a radio frequency amplifying transformer. It reduces capacity effect to the minimum—short leads so desirable are thus obtainable.

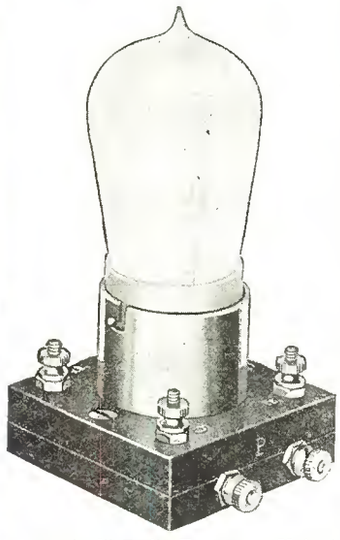
United Radio Frequency Transformers

The distributed capacity has been minimized. It has an air core and impregnated windings. Can be used efficiently on wave lengths from 200 to 600 meters.

For table panel or socket mounting. The case is of highly polished nickel having black hard rubber ends.



"United" Audio Frequency Transformer $4.50
A-1 Ratio 1:5 A-2 Ratio 1:3½



"United" Radio Frequency Unit Combination Standard Socket and Transformer $3.50

United Audio Frequency Transformers

United Transformers recently came out first in tests conducted by the University of California and are standard equipment on many of the best known radio sets in the world. Audio frequency transformers come in two ratios: type A-1, 5 to 1; type A-2, 3.5 to 1. With correctly designed transformers like "UNITED," always use the same ratio throughout all stages. There are no exceptions to this rule.

United Condensers—Vernier and Plain

The careful design and the fine precision workmanship embodied in United Condensers have made them the most widely known and best liked condensers on the market. Their unequalled performance has made them the standard condensers for all circuits. Illustrated Catalogue of complete line of United Radio Products sent on request.

The MURDOCK Five Tube Neutrodyne Receiver!

THE Murdock Five Tube Neutrodyne Receiver is the product of one of the oldest radio manufacturers—who has been making radio equipment of the highest efficiency since 1904.

This new product is the result of extensive experiments to build a receiver that will meet every requirement of the average home. It embodies the newest features, the finest and most durable workmanship. It combines simplicity of operation with superior selectivity and sensitiveness. Local stations can be tuned out easily—and distant stations tuned in with remarkable clearness and volume. All but the most distant stations can be heard on a loud speaker.

It is not a radiating receiver

THE efficient circuit and accurate assembly of units assure undistorted reception—free from the squeals and noises common to radiating sets.

In appearance the Murdock Neutrodyne is acceptable to the most exacting environment. The rich solid mahogany cabinet and black bakelite panel make it a pleasing addition to any room in the house. There are no binding posts on the front of the panel—all connecting leads being provided and arranged from the back of the cabinet. They are plainly marked.

The Murdock Neutrodyne is primarily designed for Model U.V. 201-A tubes, or tubes of similar capacity between plate and grid.

If you want a receiver that will give you the best results—go to your dealer and let him demonstrate the Murdock Neutrodyne for you. He will arrange for complete installation. The Murdock symbol is your guarantee of complete satisfaction.

Constructing a 5-Tube Neutrodyne Radio Receiver

Complete Construction, Assembly, Wiring, Balancing-Out and Tuning Information for the Home Building of a Modern and Efficient Five-Tube Neutrodyne Circuit Radio Receiver

By KIMBALL HOUSTON STARK

Breathes there a man with soul so dead that he has not enthusiastically told his neighbors with ready speech and beaming eye of his marvelous DX records the night before?

A rather funny statement was made to me the other day. The thought was presented that radio is certainly making us a nation of liars. A couple of rabid radio hounds meet at any radio store and immediately begin the discussion, infinite in detail and yet always ending with that universal topic of, "How far did you get last night?" One man hears signals 1,500 miles on a two-tube super; another chap gets Los Angeles on a one-tube set; somebody else happens to think of the old days when someone told him about hearing a commercial ship station three thousand miles west of San Francisco, from New York City, using a crystal detector—and so it goes.

It seems to me the craze for distance will never die out. I don't want it to. Of all the romance, mystery and myths that we encounter in this life and that we are told about, where can we get romance that will compare with listening-in to concerts and music and speeches from stations hundreds of miles away, from invisible cities, as it were, from an empire not of radio receivers, or equipment, not of listeners or radio fans or experimenters, but a vast empire of pleasure and entertainment, of music and of all the good things that this world has in store for us.

There are thousands and thousands of radio fans that struggle along with their one-tube sets, or their two-tube sets, who are just wishing night and day they could add a fourth tube or a fifth tube in order to hear that station a few hundred miles beyond the limit of their receivers today. Some of these radio fans can afford to buy complete receivers, but the majority must build, or would rather build, their own.

In past years, before radio came into people's homes, a man would build a mission table, a sled for the kiddies, or possibly a model engine; and, after planning for days, what a thrill he would get when the thing was actually finished and made to "work" or serve some useful purpose! Where in the world is there anything that can compare in giving to such people more thrills and pleasures, with the everyday use of a radio receiver, built by their own hands that works?

To give radio experimenters dependable, authorized constructional information concerning the neutrodyne circuit receiver is the purpose of this article.

In March of 1923, Professor L. A. Hazeltine revealed his developed work and introduced the neutrodyne-circuit radio receiver. About July of 1923, a limited number of companies licensed under Professor Hazeltine's patents were building completed receivers, utilizing the neutrodyne principle and in addition were supplying complete sets of parts suitable for neutrodyne receiver construction.

Being in intimate touch with many people who have built neutrodyne-circuit receivers using such parts, I can assure you that to build such a receiver calls for reasonable care in construction in order to obtain maximum broadcast signal reception, but for thousands who would be painstaking, the results in the end certainly justify the expense and the pains necessary.

List of Materials Necessary to Construct a Five Tube Neutrodyne Circuit Receiver

The five-tube neutrodyne-circuit receiver to be described gives two stages of tuned radio-frequency amplification, a vacuum-tube detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification. Such a receiver will cost approximately $65.00 for parts, and if one purchases all the additional equipment, the total cost will be approximately $150.00, including the five vacuum tubes, storage battery, B battery, phones and antenna material.

The following list of materials for receiver construction must be acquired:

Drilling Your Panel

For the panel, either bakelite, formica, condensite or radion may be used. A detailed panel drilling layout is shown in Fig. 1, all dimensions being given.

If you do not purchase the complete set of parts but only the necessary special neutrodyne parts, you will need to lay out your own panel for drilling. In doing this it will be found convenient to use dividers and a combination square in order to get all dimensions, etc., accurately. It is suggested that you purchase the complete set of parts, which includes the panel with all holes drilled and the proper engraving done. By using such a finished panel in constructing your receiver it presents a mighty good appearance when finished. However, if you do drill your own panel, very great care must be taken in laying out the position of the Neutroformer mounting holes as the relationship of the Neutroformers to one another is very great.

As shown on the drawing Fig. 1, the Neutroformers are mounted at an angle of 54.7° from the horizontal and should this vary even one or two degrees, trouble will be experienced in properly balancing out the receiver. On the diagram, the marking is also shown for the binding posts and telephone jacks. All holes not marked with special dimensions are to be drilled clearance for 6-32 machine screws. This requires the use of a No. 26 drill.

Assembling the Parts on the Panel

With our panel drilled and engraved, the next step is to assemble the various units on the panel. The rear view of the completed five-tube neutrodyne receiver is shown in Fig. 2, and from this picture one can get an idea of the general arrangement of the parts on the panel.

It will be noted that two of the sockets are placed between the Neutroformers, and that the triple-tube socket is placed on the left-hand end of the panel looking from the back. The rheostat at the extreme left end is a power rheostat controlling the filament current of the amplifier tubes and the rheostat closest to the left-hand Neutroformer controls the filament current of the detector tube. In the hole on the panel drilling layout marked "phones" is mounted a two spring closed-circuit telephone jack. This is directly under the knob of the vernier rheostat. In the other or "horn" jack is mounted a three-spring automatic filament-control jack. The filament switch, binding posts and sockets are easily assembled in their proper position. The Neutroformers should be very securely screwed to the panel in their proper position as the operation of the set would be affected if they were even slightly moved out of position during assembly and wiring.

Wiring Up the Five-Tube Neutrodyne Set

The wiring of a receiver is usually the stumbling block for most of the experimenters. I have seen some of the most horrible looking jobs on neutrodyne receivers, yet when the job was properly balanced out, it worked O. K. This should not be taken as a criterion, however, and the experimenter is advised to take particular pains in wiring up his set.

Study the wiring diagram in Fig. 3 very carefully. Note in particular the polarity of the Neutroformer windings, audio-frequency transformers, and especially the connections of the Neutrodons and telephone jacks. All high-potential plate and grid leads should be kept as widely separated as possible and all wiring separated at least one-half inch with as few leads running parallel to one another as possible.

In assembling the receiver, it is usually best to fasten the base board to the panel, and to fasten the audio-frequency transformers and Neutrodons to the base board. Before wiring up the receiver, however, one should unfasten the baseboard from the panel, as this makes it much easier to wire all the parts mounted on the panel. Then fasten the base board with its Neutrodons and audio-frequency transformers again into place to complete the wiring of these units.

It is usually best to begin wiring by connecting all the negative vacuum-tube socket terminals and then extending this same wire to the ground binding post. In like manner, the positive filament connections can be made and the wiring of the detector tube rheostat, power rheostat, battery switch and battery binding posts completed.

Connections to the Neutroformers come next. It will be noted that all the Neutroformer secondary windings have a small loop or tap. On the wiring diagram no connection is made to the tap of the first or left hand Neutroformer looking from the panel front. A lead is connected, however, from the tap of the second and third Neutroformers going directly to one terminal respectively of the second and third Neutrodon condensers.

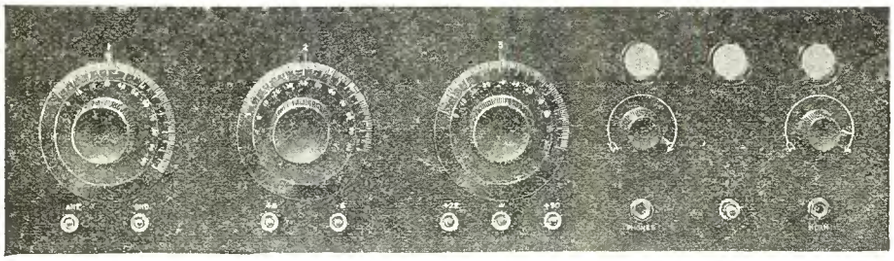

Fig. 4.

The fixed condensers with capacities as shown on the wiring diagram are wired into position and need not be fastened either to the panel or base board, as the stiff No. 14 copper wire will hold them in position. After you have completed wiring up your receiver or preferably step by step as you fasten each wire in position check off with a heavy pencil on the wiring diagram the connection that you have just made. When the wiring is completed, all wires will have been checked and in addition by doing the job this way, you are doubly checking yourself for mistakes.

On the wiring diagram, no wire is shown jumping another one with a loop symbol. The plan shows each wire passing across the others and only connecting to cross wires when represented by a solid black dot. Check this carefully with your own wiring.

In the next article of this series, detailed instructions will be given for balancing out the inherent capacity of the vacuum tubes as well as the stray-circuit capacities, thereby eliminating parasitic and distorting oscillations and regeneration.

The need for Balancing-out or Neutralizing the Circuit

Many people who have constructed neutrodyne receivers have possibly found the adjusting or "balancing out" of the set before it is ready for use, a difficult task. In most cases, it has been difficult, not because the process itself is complicated but because of a misunderstanding of the results to be obtained and the methods of obtaining them.

It may be well at this time to consider the function of the neutrodyne circuit in order to understand just what is accomplished when we balance out or adjust it for capacity neutralization.

Professor Hazeltine devised a method of neutralizing both the stray-circuit capacities and the inherent capacity of the vacuum tube, i.e., the capacity existing between the filament or cathode and plate or anode of the tube. It is the presence of these coupling capacities in an ordinary tuned radio-frequency amplifier circuit that causes the circuit to regenerate and oscillate when the tuned amplifier circuits are in resonance, unless some means is provided for controlling the grid potential of the tubes, which usually results in a loss of efficiency.

Such parasitic oscillations make it impossible to secure pure radio-frequency amplification and in addition cause very decided signal and speech distortion. Every listener-in knows the disadvantages of tuning-in to a local concert and hearing all sorts of "birdies."

In Professor Hazeltine's arrangement, however, coupling capacities are made to counteract each other and each individual tube circuit is balanced against another tube circuit so as to reach a condition where no signals can be heard in the phones because passing through coupling capacities existing in the circuit.

In the Neutrodyne circuit, the electromagnetic coupling between the Neutroformers is approximately zero. The effect of this is to make one portion of the circuit capacity balance against another practically equal portion of circuit and tube capacity, so as to eliminate or neutralize the effect of the parasitic feedback capacities of the entire circuit.

How to Neutralize the Circuit

In practice, the balancing-out process consists of exciting the coupled receiver circuits with a comparatively strong signal and then adjusting the special neutralizing capacities or Neutrodons, as they are called, to a point where that signal becomes inaudible. The fact that this adjustment of the neutralizing capacities is made toward a minimum or inaudible signal and can accordingly be made very exact, gives us proof that the method of neutralization is a true process of actual circuit capacity neutralization and not a method of preventing or reducing regeneration. This is even more forcibly brought out when it is realized that the adjustment is made without lighting the filament of the tube you are adjusting.

In addition to the battery connection, a special balancing-out circuit must be hooked up. The balancing-out circuit consists of an inductance and a variable condenser excited by a buzzer and coupled to the input or antenna terminal of the completed receiver. It is usually desirable to place this adjusting circuit 10 or 15 feet away from the actual receiver and lead a single wire over to the antenna binding post. To complete the balancing-out circuit arrangement, a wire is connected from the main terminal of the receiver to the ground such as a water pipe, etc. The wiring and circuit constants of such a circuit are shown in Fig. 5.

CIRCUIT DIAGRAM FOR NEUTRODYNE RECEIVER ADJUSTMENT

1. Turn the knobs of both detector and amplifier rheostats as far to the left as possible.

2. Insert two UV-201-A or C-301 vacuum tubes in the radio-frequency amplifier tube sockets (the two single-tube sockets at the left end of the receiver looking from the panel front). In the detector-tube socket (the one directly above the phones jack), insert a UV-200 or C-300 detector tube.

3. Pull out the filament switch between the phones and horn jack, thus closing the filament circuit, and turn the amplifier rheostat (the one at the extreme left of the panel) so that the pointer points directly at the number three Neutroformer dial. This is about the correct position of the rheostat for the UV-201 A tubes. Turning this rheostat to this position will light the filament of the first two left-hand tubes. Now turn the knob of the detector rheostat about three-quarters of the way around or approximaely with the pointer at the right and pointing toward the pointer of the amplifier rheostat. It is best to adjust the detector rheostat slightly so that when the phones are plugged into the phone jack, the detector rheostat will be adjusted just below a point where a decided sizzling and frying sound is heard in the phones.

4. With the buzzer of the balancing-out circuit running, rotate all three Neutroformer dials from the front of the panel, about in step with each other, and pick up the buzzer signals with the variable condenser of the adjusting circuit set at approximately 15 or 20 degrees (an approximate wave length of 225 meters). The buzzer signals should be picked up at about the same setting, near 15 or 20 degrees on all three of the dials. When buzzer signals are picked up, all three Neutroformer dials should be adjusted very slowly until buzzer signals come in at their maximum. At this point the dials should have approximately the same settings.

5. Remove the tube from the left-hand tube socket.

6. Readjust the three Neutroformer dials again for maximum signals.

7. Take the UV-201-A tube removed from the left-hand socket and place a small piece of paper over either one of its filament contact pins so that the paper will remain in position when the tube is again inserted in its socket.

8. Place the tube with the insulated contact pin back in its socket. This allows the connection of the plate and grid of this tube to the receiver circuit, but as one of the filament contacts is insulated, the filament of the tube will not light. With the tube in its socket and the filament unlit, signals will still undoubtedly be heard, but with considerably less volume than before. It will be found that by adjusting the brass tube of the first or left-hand Neutrodon lengthwise over the glass insulating tubing, the strength of signals heard with the tube in its socket with the filament circuit inoperative can be varied from loud to a minimum or inaudible signal. The desired adjustment point is the one where the signals are very weak or disappear entirely and no sound is heard in the phones. To prove the minimum signal point, the tube can be lifted out of the socket and immediately signals can come in at their maximum as they did at the end of the adjustment 6 above. Replacing the tube in its socket (with the paper still in place) will cause the signals to disappear or be heard at the minimum signal intensity. The ideal condition for the Neutrodon adjustment is for the signal to disappear entirely when the tube is in its socket (with the paper in place) and at this point the Neutrodon clamp should be tightened down securely. For a more permanent adjustment of the Neutrodon, the clamp, after being tightened down, can be directly soldered to the sliding brass adjustment tube.

This covers the neutralizing adjustment for the first radio-frequency amplifying tube (the one on the extreme left). The same procedure is followed with the second radio-frequency amplifying tube (the second tube from the left looking from the panel front). In this case the first left-hand tube and the detector tube are kept in their sockets and lit, and the second left-hand tube removed and its filament terminals insulated after which the neutralization adjustment covered in paragraphs 7 and 9 should be followed out in detail, adjusting the second Neutrodon from the left and of the base board and securing the adjustment at the given inaudible signal point.

The most important point to follow in this balancing-out process is to adjust all three Neutroformer dials for a maximum signal when either the first or second tube is taken out of its socket and before the neutralization and adjustments are made with the insulated filament contact pin of either the first or second tube in its respective socket.

A further test, to determine that the circuit is properly balanced out, is made with the A batteries still connected and with the antenna and ground connected to their respective binding posts, all tubes being in the receiver without any of the terminals insulated. One can try to receive broadcast signals by adjusting the receiver dials, etc., similar to method of tuning for balancing out signals described above.

By tuning the receiver one should be able to receive broadcasted signals without hearing beat notes, whistling, etc., which are the usual indications of regeneration or oscillation. If, under any circumstances, such whistles are encountered, the entire receiver should be carefully gone over and possibly re-wired and readjusted, as will be described in detail in the third article of this series. If beat notes, etc., are heard, it is proof that the circuit is not functioning according to the neutrodyne principle and most satisfactory results cannot be obtained. The experimenter is cautioned to make sure that his receiver is adjusted properly and that no parasitic disturbances are caused by the improper capacity neutralization in the circuit, otherwise the value of the neutrodyne circuit will not be realized.

Operating the Neutrodyne Five Tube Set

The necessity of such a neutralizing adustment is characteristic only of neutrodyne receivers. Due to the radical difference of the circuit, the method of tuning is also quite different from the tuning of the usual regenerative or non-regenerative receiver. Consequently, instructions must be very explicit.

In this article, we shall accordingly study in detail the method of tuning neutrodyne circuit receivers and in addition, some general information will be given on antennas, vacuum tubes and "trouble-shooting."

Tuning the Receiver

The procedure of tuning your neutrodyne receiver, providing antenna, ground, and all battery connections have been properly made, is as follows:

1. Insert the recommended vacuum tubes (See paragraph on the use of different tubes) in their respective sockets and with the power rheostat at its correct position for the type of tubes you are using, and with the vernier rheostat knob turned to the left as far as possible, and with the plug of the loud speaker inserted in the "horn" jack, pull out the knob of the filament switch on the panel front, causing the three amplifier tube filaments to light.

2. Turn the vernier rheostat knob to the right slowly. When the filament current is turned on, the first indication that the receiver is functioning properly will be indicated by a slight noise in the phones. As the rheostat knob is turned farther to the right, this slight sensitivity indication does not increase in volume until a point near the end of the rheostat adjustment is reached. At this point will begin a comparatively loud "hissing" and "frying" noise. For the best signal reception the rheostat should be turned back slightly to a point just before this "hissing" and "frying" starts.

3. With the detector tube at approximately its right operating point, set "Neutroformer" dials 2 and 3 at the same dial setting. Select any particular dial setting, but take for instance the wavelength of station WEAF, 492 meters. Dial settings for this particular station are about 66 or 67. Setting dials 2 and 3 at this point, rotate dial 1 very slowly over its entire range from 0 to 100. If any broadcasting station is operating at the particular time at 492 meters, it should be heard at a maximum when the setting of dial 1 is approximately in the range of 10 or 15 above or below these settings of dials 2 and 3.

4. When signals from any particular broadcasting station are coming in, it is advisable to readjust dials, 1, 2 and 3 slightly and possibly also the vernier rheostat, in order to increase the intensity of the signals.

In tuning, the dials should be moved slowly. It may be found that the tuning adjustment will have to be changed slightly when shifting the phone plug or loud speaker plug from one jack to another.

Dials 2 and 3 should be rotated slowly at the same time, and about in step with each other. Then with dials 2 and 3 on the setting for a particular station, dial 1 is rotated until signals come in with maximum strength and clarity. Sharpness of tuning of neutrodyne receivers when using short indoor antennas is much greater than when using outdoor antennas.

In tuning neutrodyne receivers, the broadcasting stations will not be picked up by hearing "beat notes" and the usual regenerative whistling. As the dials are rotated the programs of different stations will be heard, first softly then with greater intensity and clarity as all adjustments are properly made for that particular station.

Using Different Tubes With the Neutrodyne

In the early stages of neutrodyne receiver development, receivers were constructed that allowed the neutralization of a given tube and circuit capacity and which did not operate efficiently when different vacuum tubes having different capacities were used. With the placing on the market of the UV-20-A and the dry-cell tube, this matter of basic design was very carefully studied, and now they, and other tubes, can be used with comparatively good success. It has been found that C-301-A tubes are the best for the radio and audio-frequency amplifier circuits. The C-300 or UV-200 is the best to use as a detector tube. The UV-201-A is very good as an amplifier tube and is a close second to the C-301-A. I have been in intimate touch with many users of neutrodyne receivers and a great many of them have had good success with WD-11, WD-12, VT-1, VT-2, 216-A, and UV-199 tubes. When using any of these various types, it is, of course, necessary to make sure that correct filament voltages as well as filament current is supplied to the tubes.

The volume obtained using UV-199's or other dry-cell tubes is generally less than the volume obtained using UV-201-A or C-301-A tubes, and this in general is true when any of the other different types of dry-cell tubes are used. The volume obtained, however, with dry-cell tubes under conditions permits loud speaker operation on distant stations. It is suggested, however, that with UV-199 tubes as radio-frequency amplifiers, C-301-A or UV-201-A tubes be used for the audio-frequency amplification.

The Most Suitable Antenna

An outdoor antenna 60 to 70 ft. long and 30 ft. to 40 ft. high, is possibly the best for use with a neutrodyne receiver. The multiple-wire antenna is generally no better than the single wire type for receiving.

A great many people desire to use an indoor antenna, either through necessity or to eliminate the trouble and expense of an outdoor installation. With a five-tube neutrodyne receiver, constructed in accordance with these articles, such an arrangement is feasible and in fact very good results can be obtained if one does not insist on getting the distant stations. A stretch of wire 50 or 60 ft. long in an apartment will work nicely, but this same length of wire should not be coiled around the wall in a single room and the same results expected.

There is still loop reception to be considered. Many people are using neutrodyne receivers with loop antennas. There are several methods of connecting a loop to the receiver; connecting one terminal of the loop to the antenna binding post; connecting both terminals to the antenna binding post; thus shortening the loop itself; connecting the loop in series with a variable condenser and then connecting the condenser and loop in series with the antenna and ground binding post; and connecting one terminal to the antenna post and the other to the ground post. This is the arrangement most frequently used. In any of these cases it will usually be best to have the ground binding post to the receiver connected to the ground wire. The five-tube receiver described is not designed primarily for loop reception and an outdoor antenna is strongly advised.

"Trouble Shooting"

There are people who build receivers that have very little technical knowledge, and it is somewhat difficult to describe to them technical processes. Even the simplest thing which the radio amateur or experimenter takes for granted are at first puzzling to the uninitiated, and it is not surprising that many people who have constructed neutrodyne circuit receivers have not been able to obtain complete satisfaction at their first efforts.

A detailed list of "trouble-shooting" instructions that will usually aid the home constructor to put the breath of life into his receiver satisfactorily follows:

Check all connections very carefully with the wiring diagram given in Figure 3. After your own check convinces you that your wiring is correct and absolutely identical with the diagram, it is best to have someone else check it over so that the same mistake will not be repeated.

A point of great importance is that the variable condenser of the Neutroformer unit rotary plate terminal be connected directly to the negative terminal of the vacuum-tube socket of the amplifier tubes. It will be noted in the diagram, however, that this wire from the rotary condenser plate terminal of the third from the right hand Neutroformer connects to the +90-volt terminal of the detector tube.

Audio Transformers: Many times, when howling occurs, reversing the connections to the primaries of either one or both of the audio-frequency transformers will remedy the trouble.

Fixed Condensers: In special cases, where trouble with balancing-out is had, it may be advantageous to cut out entirely the fixed condenser (capacity .006 mfd.) which is connected from the detector tube plate terminal to ground of the negative A and B batteries common lead. Eliminating this condenser and re-balancing carefully will many times secure a very good minimum or inaudible signal balance.

Dirty Contacts: Connections which lead from the elements of the vacuum tube to the direct terminals are soldered to the tube contact pins and these soldering connections oxidize and become dirty very quickly. One should see that the bottoms of these tube contact pins are always bright and clean.

Neutroformer Mounting: The neutrodyne circuit requires that all electromagnetic coupling as well as electrostatic coupling be balanced or neutralized. Accordingly, the mounting of the Neutroformer is of great importance, and the correct angle that they should be mounted at is 54.7° from the horizontal. A slight variation from this angle will cause trouble in balancing out. If the experimenter drills his own panels, great care should be taken to see that this angle is correct.

Be sure that all your connections are O. K. Then if your set is built in accordance with the directions given in these articles, the results will repay you many times over for your work.

Audio Frequency Power Amplification

A summary of the design and operation of Power (Push-Pull) amplification with Suggestions for the construction of such a unit.

The addition of power amplification to the ordinary audio frequency amplifier solves the problem of faithfully reproducing broadcast programs with greater volume. You will surely be delighted with the purity and richness of tone that this form of amplification develops in any good loud speaker.

After extensive research work in our laboratories, we have designed and perfected transformers especially adapted for the well-known "PUSH-PULL" form of power amplification. This circuit is featured above because exhaustive tests have proved that it is the most efficient method of obtaining power amplification.

This POWER AMPLIFIER utilizes two tubes which are practically placed in parallel, because their grid terminals are connected to the opposite ends of the secondary winding of the INPUT transformer.

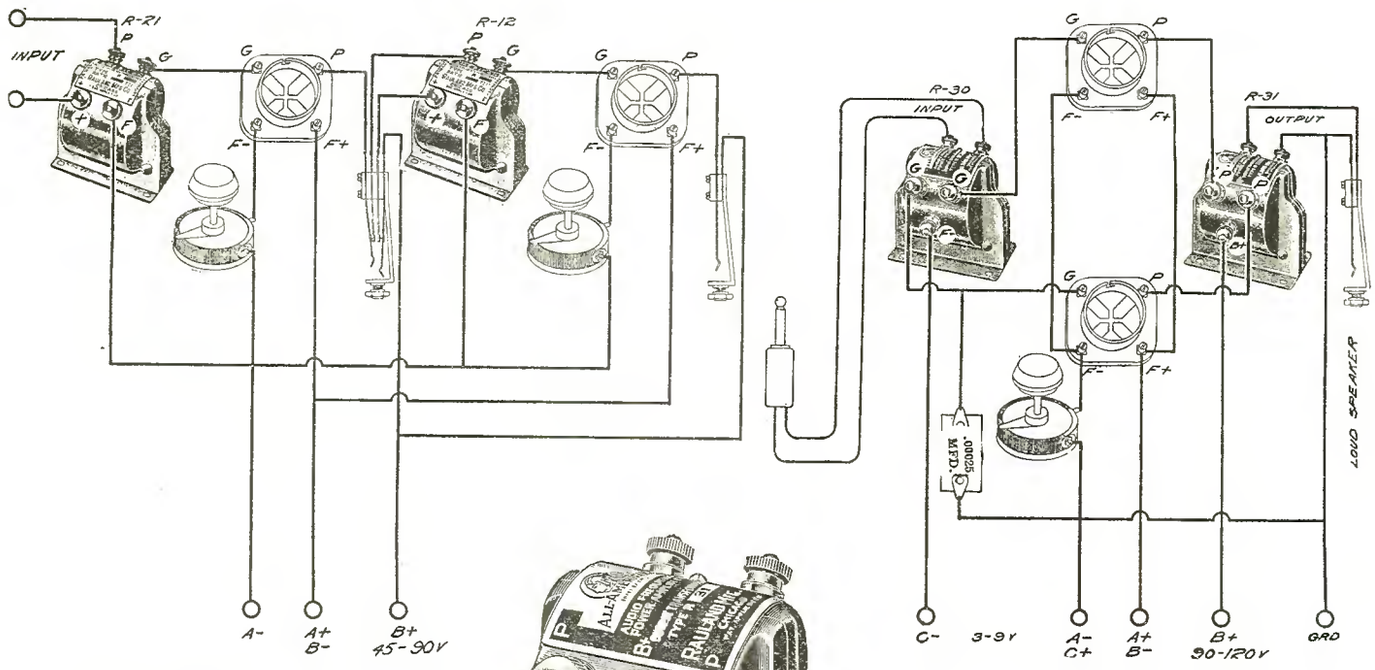
The INPUT transformer has, of course, a primary winding. The special feature, however, is the two secondary windings, each having a common terminal which connects with the negative filament through the "C" or biasing battery.

The other ends of this double secondary winding, as used in the ALL-AMERICAN INPUT transformer, are the grid terminals.

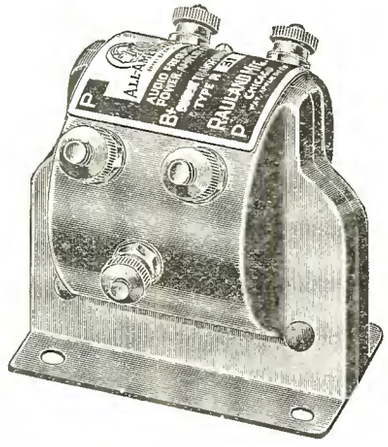
This secondary winding is sometimes referred to as a "split" winding; in that case the center tap is the same as the common terminal just referred to.

The advantage of the double secondary winding is that the impedance of both will be exactly the same. This is important, due to the balancing action described below.

This method applies an EMF on the grids of these two tubes exactly 180° out of phase. In other words, one tube is in operation during one-half of the cycle, while the other tube functions during the other half. This action "balances out" or neutralizes the distortion of harmonics usually produced when only one tube is used.



Circuit No. 1 (Audio Stages)



All-American Power Amplifying Transformer. Input Type R-30.....$6.00

Circuit No. 2 (Power Stage)

Circuit No. 2 illustrates the All-American Power Amplifier as a separate unit. We recommend that "push-pull" POWER AMPLIFICATION always be used as a separate unit. This unit of POWER AMPLIFICATION can be added to any good audio frequency amplifying unit, or if moderate volume is required, to the receiver with detector only.

If you desire to build the very best audio frequency amplifier possible we strongly recommend that you follow out in detail circuit No. 1, in conjunction with circuit No. 2. You will note that these circuits embody two stages of ordinary transformer coupled amplification with the addition of the power unit, or stage. For best results it is important that ALL-AMERICAN transformers be used throughout. For the first stage use TYPE R-21, ratio 5 to 1; for the second stage, TYPE R-12, ratio 3 to 1, as shown in circuit No. 1. For the power stage use TYPE R-30 INPUT and TYPE R-31 OUTPUT, as shown in circuit No. 2.

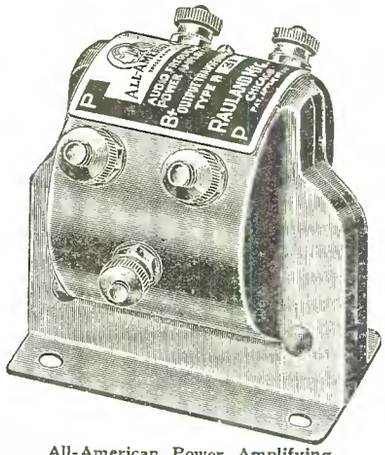
SUGGESTIONS

Follow layout of apparatus as shown in diagrams. Make connections from transformers to circuit exactly as indicated on transformer plate. Grid and plate leads or wiring should be as short as possible to eliminate local feed back effects.

We recommend the use of the U. V. 201-A or C. 301-A tube throughout the amplifier. Be sure that you use tubes of like characteristics in the power stage. This is essential to obtain the balancing effect; it is not so important in the other stages. Tubes of specifications other than those recommended will operate very well in this circuit, but if you must purchase additional tubes it will be wise to follow our suggestions.



All-American Power Amplifying Transformer. Output Type R-31.....$6.00

Ordinarily 90 volts will be found best for the plate potential; however, when using power tubes, greater voltages will be required, depending upon their specifications. It is essential that the "C" or biasing battery be used. When using the recommended tubes, six volts will be sufficient; however, we suggest that you experiment with voltages ranging from three to nine and choose the value that gives the best tone. Ordinary flashlight cells will be found practical.

We suggest the grounding of the transformer casings to the negative "A" battery or ground.

DO NOT use so-called non-corrosive soldering flux in making joints in your wiring. Use only resin core solder.

"SUN" Tuner Unit
including "SUN" Loading Coil and "SUN" R.F. Transformer

Cold words cannot carry to your mind the unbelievably beautiful tone brought in by the "SUN"—it is not just faithful reproduction—it is not reproduction at all—it is the sound itself, wafted to you over tens or thousands of miles with all the purity delicacy and volume you would hear if you were one of that far distant audience.

Many ordinary sets "bring in" distance stations. But how? Not at all without the ear phones—and even then only poor, scratchy sound, either so weak and wavering, or so distorted, blaring and vibrating as to almost lose identity.

But most "SUN" owners do not use a head piece even for tuning. As you turn to the proper wave length and adjust the rheostats, there is absolutely no squealing, howling, hissing or spill-overs. Out of the dead silence comes the sound—clear, living, vivid tone—as pure, true and pleasing as when it issued from the throat or the instruments at the broad-casting station.

That is what "SUN" selecti y means—loud speaker tone, quality and vo me from distant stations that surpasses nearby reception of most five to eight tube sets.

Abroad, regenerative sets are forbidden because of the interference to other receivers nearby. A movement is under way in this country to restrict them. The "SUN" is a four tube receiver which is positively non-regenerative. Sold under a broad guarantee, it is the nearest to perfection of any receiving set you can buy today.

All good dealers are prepared to accept orders for "SUN" Receiver Sets completely assembled, or knocked down ready for assembling, or you may purchase the "SUN" Tuner Unit only and build the set from standard parts. If your dealer cannot serve you, we will ship direct upon receipt of check or money-order.

Don't Blame Your Batteries For Those "Frying" Noises

Do you know that faulty socket contacts are the cause of a great deal of the disagreeable noises in receiving sets? Yet the largest battery manufacturer, after elaborate tests, declares that there are no noisy B batteries. The causes of "frying" and "sizzling" are faulty contacts or connections.

Na-ald Sockets and adapters, with their dependable contact (dual wipe on the De Luxe), eliminate this trouble. There's a Na-ald socket or adapter for every tube. "It's the contact that counts."

Na-ald De Luxe Dials do double duty on a radio receiver. They are beautiful. They give that final touch of distinction which completes the attractive appearance of a set, and adds to pride of ownership.

They help to tune. The big generous knobs fit fingers perfectly. The graduations are even, and marked with a permanent, brilliant white. The numerals are exceptionally clear and are placed on the bevel. There are no finger cramps when tuning with a Na-ald Dial.

Na-ald Condensers have non-bending duraluminum plates meeting Signal Corps specifications, and made according to Bureau of Standards square law design, which insures uniform wave length increase. Insulation is moisture-proof and non-warping. Each condenser is furnished with a braided tinsel pig-tail connection and with a Na-ald dial insuring minimum absorption losses.

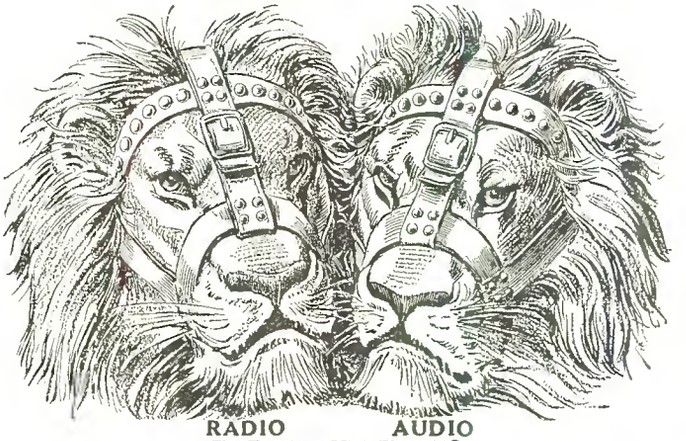
"MAXUM"
AUDIO AND RADIO FREQUENCY
TRANSFORMERS



RADIO AUDIO
—THE MAXUM TWINS—
CANNOT ROAR OR HOWL

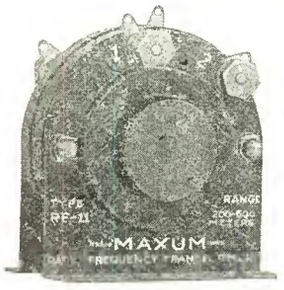
Exclusive Features of "Maxum" Audio Transformers

1. Coils wound on hard rubber form making a rugged, well finished unit.
2. Coils are stagger wound and are not wound in layers. Stagger winding results in a much lower distributed capacity than layer winding, with a resulting wider frequency band than would otherwise be the case.
3. The coils are not paraffine impregnated as impregnation also increases the capacity effect and as is well known, paraffine will "sweat" causing leakage.
4. Three layers of 1000 volt varnished silk insulation is used between primary and secondary windings.
5. One piece laminations provide a magnetic circuit completely surrounding the coil, with no leakage. These laminations are staggered in assembly in order to prevent excessive air gaps which cause distortion.
6. Transformer is mounted in a completely shielding steel case which is the only correct method of shielding. Brass and other non-magnetic metals are not electro-magnetic shields.

"MAXUM" AUDIO FREQUENCY TRANSFORMERS

The same Size and Type of Case used for all Models and Ratios.

Designed for use with all standard tubes. Closed shell type core of highest grade Silicon Steel eliminates distortion. SHEET STEEL case makes them "howl-proof." 50% to 200% greater amplification.



"MAXUM" RADIO FREQUENCY TRANSFORMERS

For use with UV-201-A or C-301-A vacuum tubes, use RF25 for one stage of radio amplification, and for two stages, use RF11 next to detector tube and RF25 in preceding stage. With UV-199, C-299, WD11 or WD12, use RF11 for any and all stages.

Maximum Efficiency Cannot Be Obtained by Using:—

Even layer, form wound coils, paraffine impregnated coils, small types of transformers that have either too few turns or that use a wire smaller than No. 40, and transformers having an incomplete magnetic field with lap or butt joints in the core construction.

MAXUM TRANSFORMERS

are made in the following types and ratios:

Cat. Nos.	Ratio	Price
AF31	3 to 1	$5.00 Each
AF312	3½ to 1
AF41	4 to 1
AF412	4½ to 1
AF51	5 to 1
AF61	6 to 1
AF91	9 to 1
AF101	10 to 1

Cat. Nos.	Multi-ratio	Price
MR6	2 to 1— 5 to 1 3 to 1— 6 to 1 4 to 1—10 to 1	$6.00 each
PP1	Push-Pull	$6.00 each
PP2	Push-Pull	$12.00 per pr.
RF11 RF25 Reflex		$4.00 each

They have that reserve power that "could waken the dead" or that can be tamed down to a whisper, providing perfect modulation and clarity over the entire range of the musical scale from the low notes of the base viol to the high falsetto notes of the violin.

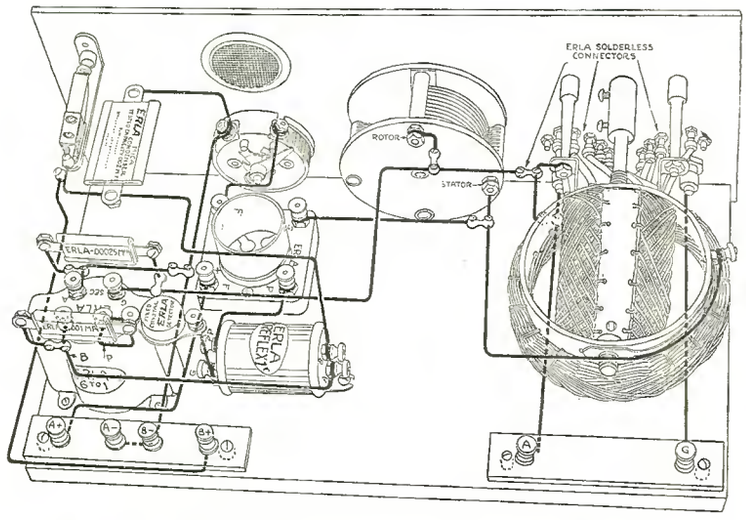
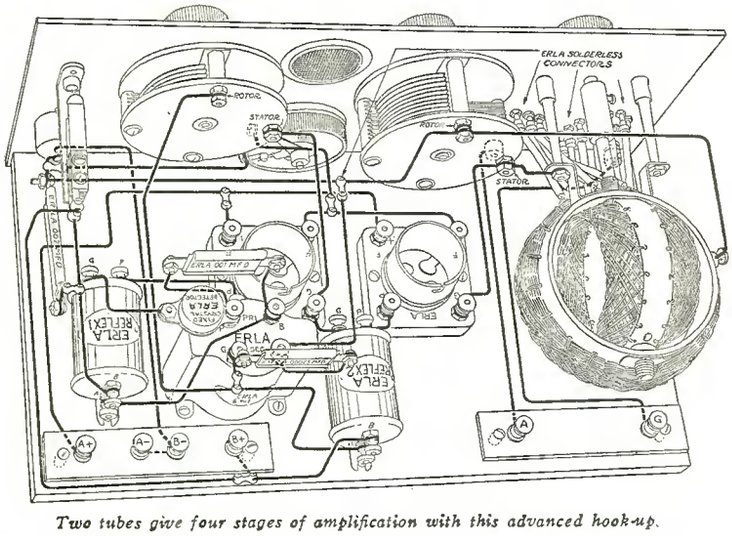
FAMOUS ERLA DUO-REFLEX CIRCUITS

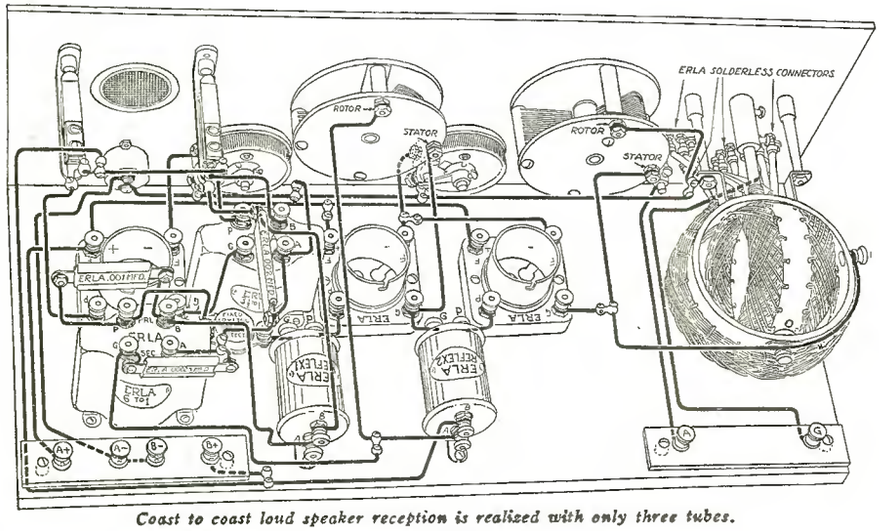
Tube for Tube, the Most Powerful Circuits Known



The original and still unsurpassed one-tube loud speaker circuit.



Two tubes give four stages of amplification with this advanced hook-up.



Coast to coast loud speaker reception is realized with only three tubes.

TIME serves only to emphasize the superiority of Erla Duo-Reflex Circuits, tube for tube, the most powerful circuits ever built.

Based upon the unique Erla principle of duo-reflex amplification that enables vacuum tubes to do triple duty, they outstrip materially comparable circuits in range and volume.

One Tube Operates Loud Speaker

Even the single-tube circuit normally operates a loud speaker over an extensive range, while the three-tube circuit is equal to five tubes otherwise disposed. The two-tube circuit is correspondingly effective, providing two stages each of radio and audio amplification.

Not only in range and volume, but in tone quality and purity of reproduction, do these circuits surpass contemporary standards. Tuning is extremely sharp and selective, local broadcasting being excluded at will, and there is a complete absence of distortion and parasitic noises. Controls are few and simple, providing maximum ease of operation.

Apparatus Greatly Improved

In the development and perfection of these circuits, infinitely more is achieved than the mere provision of new and effective means of linking together fundamental types of apparatus.

From the ground up, each unit of construction has been scientifically improved to utmost efficiency and complete conformity with the peculiar and exacting requirements of reflex work, supreme test of radio apparatus design.

Especially radio and audio frequency transformers, crystals and fixed condensers, vital units in reflex operation, have been developed and perfected through exhaustive, painstaking research work, to standards of excellence hitherto unapproached.

And, finally, through advanced precision manufacturing and laboratory testing methods, positive assurance is provided that the ideal qualities prescribed are incorporated in each piece of Erla apparatus with rigidly unvarying accuracy.

Not only, therefore, through advanced type of circuits, but in even greater measure through the scientifically correct construction and correlation of essential Erla apparatus has the remarkable success of Erla Duo-Reflex circuits been attained.

For a more complete discussion of the principles involved, consult Erla Bulletin No. 20, distributed gratis by leading radio dealers. Or write direct, giving your dealer's name.

BLUE PRINTS: For those unaccustomed to working from diagrams of the type here shown, complete blue prints, drawn to scale, have been prepared. List price: one-tube, 25c; two-tube, 35c; three-tube, 35c.

Wonderful Acoustic Properties of "Madera" Artificial WOOD

The one thing that Radio lacked to secure 100% reproduction of voice and music!

"Madera" is a remarkably resonant material, made by casting wood fibre in steel molds, under a pressure of 12 tons to the sq. in., and 800 degrees of heat. It reproduces voice or music in its original purity and distinctive tone-quality—amplified by the harmonious vibrations of the dense, violin-like walls of the horn.

Each "Clearspeaker" is fitted with a special Baldwin loudspeaker of great power and clearness. It will improve the performance of any radio set adapted to loudspeaker service and is being used witb success on sets which could use no other loudspeaker—even some of the better crystal outfits.

Imagine a violin made of metal! Think back to the days when phonographs had jangly metal horns—and remember how wood cabinets lifted them out of the class of noisemaking toys into the realm of true musical instruments. Madera Clearspeakers are rendering the same service to Radio.

They are beautifully finished, in black or brown and are an ornament to the finest home.

RADIO DIALS

Play Important Part In MU-RAD Triumph

A proud North Carolina owner of a MU-RAD Receiver reports having heard program broadcasted from station at Glasgow, Scotland.

EZTOON DIALS made possible the close tuning necessary to bring in this station at such a great distance.

When Radio Engineers like those that designed MU-RAD Receivers specify EZTOON RADIO DIALS as standard equipment, it is conclusive proof of their superiority.

You, too, can improve the reception of your receiver by replacing present dials with EZTOON easy tune radio dials. Simply take off your present dials, slip on EZTOON—tighten set screw and you can get that fine accurate tuning you thought impossible before.

If you are contemplating building a new set use EZTOON RADIO DIALS and pick up the stations your friends claim can't be brought in.

EZTOON Radio Dials make possible vernier adjustment of variocouplers, variometers, rheostats, potentiometers, tickler coils, and make extra set of plates on vernier condenser unnecessary. In fact can be used on any tuning instrument to obtain close adjustment.

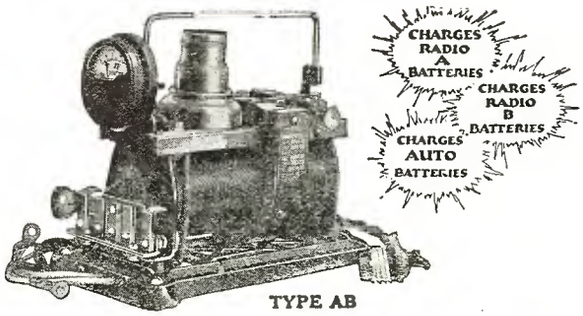
F-F BATTERY CHARGER

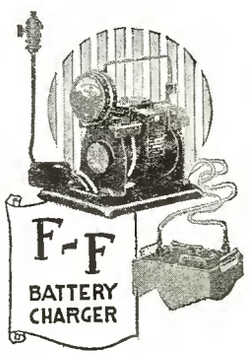


TYPE AB

The Triple Duty Battery Charger

EVERY radio enthusiast should get the full measure of service from his batteries, by keeping an F-F battery charger always ready to be connected when battery voltages get low.

The F-F type AB Battery Charger renders a triple duty battery service. It charges 2, 4 or 6 volt Radio "A" batteries; Radio "B" batteries from 20 to 120 volts—an exceptional range; and will also charge 6 volt Auto batteries. Will charge a battery for five cents. Strongly built to give long continuous service. Fool-proof and simple—easily adjusted for various voltages. Will charge a dead battery because it operates independently of battery.



TYPE 6

Note These Features

1. Simplicity of operation—just attach to light socket and turn on current.
2. Copper to earbon contactors cannot BURN or STICK.
3. Charger automatically stops if supply current fails.
4. Will not discharge current already in battery.
5. No complicated mechanism to get out of order.

Type AB Charger; price, $20; west of the Rockies, $22.

Type 6 — Charges 6-volt A or auto battery—price, $15; west of the Rockies, $16.

A Fine Combination

for every radio man—

WESTON INSTANT CHANGE PLUG! Interchangeable in 2 seconds. Merely press triggers to pull cables out. Shove cables in to connect. No tools. Operators everywhere admit its infinite superiority. Ask your dealer to let you see it or get it for you.

WESTON FILAMENT VOLTMETER. With this Model 301 Weston Voltmeter you can always duplicate instantly any voltage required and exact tuning is thereafter a simple matter. Invaluable because it saves tubes from burning out. For quick tuning and good reception, it is an absolute necessity. Case diameter 3¼ in.

THERMO-GALVANOMETER. This Model 425 is a sensitive thermo-milliammeter of low resistance for use in connection with wave meters. It measures wave length and decrement. Instrument resistance about 4.5 ohms requires 115 milliamperes for full scale deflation. Flange diameter 3¼ in.

ANTENNAE AMMETER. Specially designed to measure antennae current. It eliminates all troubles encountered in hot wire types—has no zero shift and is thoroughly compensated against changes in temperatures. It is the adopted standard in commercial and government work. Flange diameter 3¼ in.

The name Weston signifies the best quality in measuring instruments in exactly the same manner as Sterling denotes a quality of silver or Tiffany a quality of diamond. The Weston Electrical Instrument Company was the pioneer. And for 35 years, it has been the leader in the manufacture of electrical indicating instruments. Weston instruments have stood the test of time.

All Weston Radio Instruments are described in booklet "J". You need Booklet "J" if for no other reason than to know how to test out transmitting and receiving circuits. Instrument connections shown. Sent free on request.

The filament kontrol FIL-KO-STAT of infinite adjustment

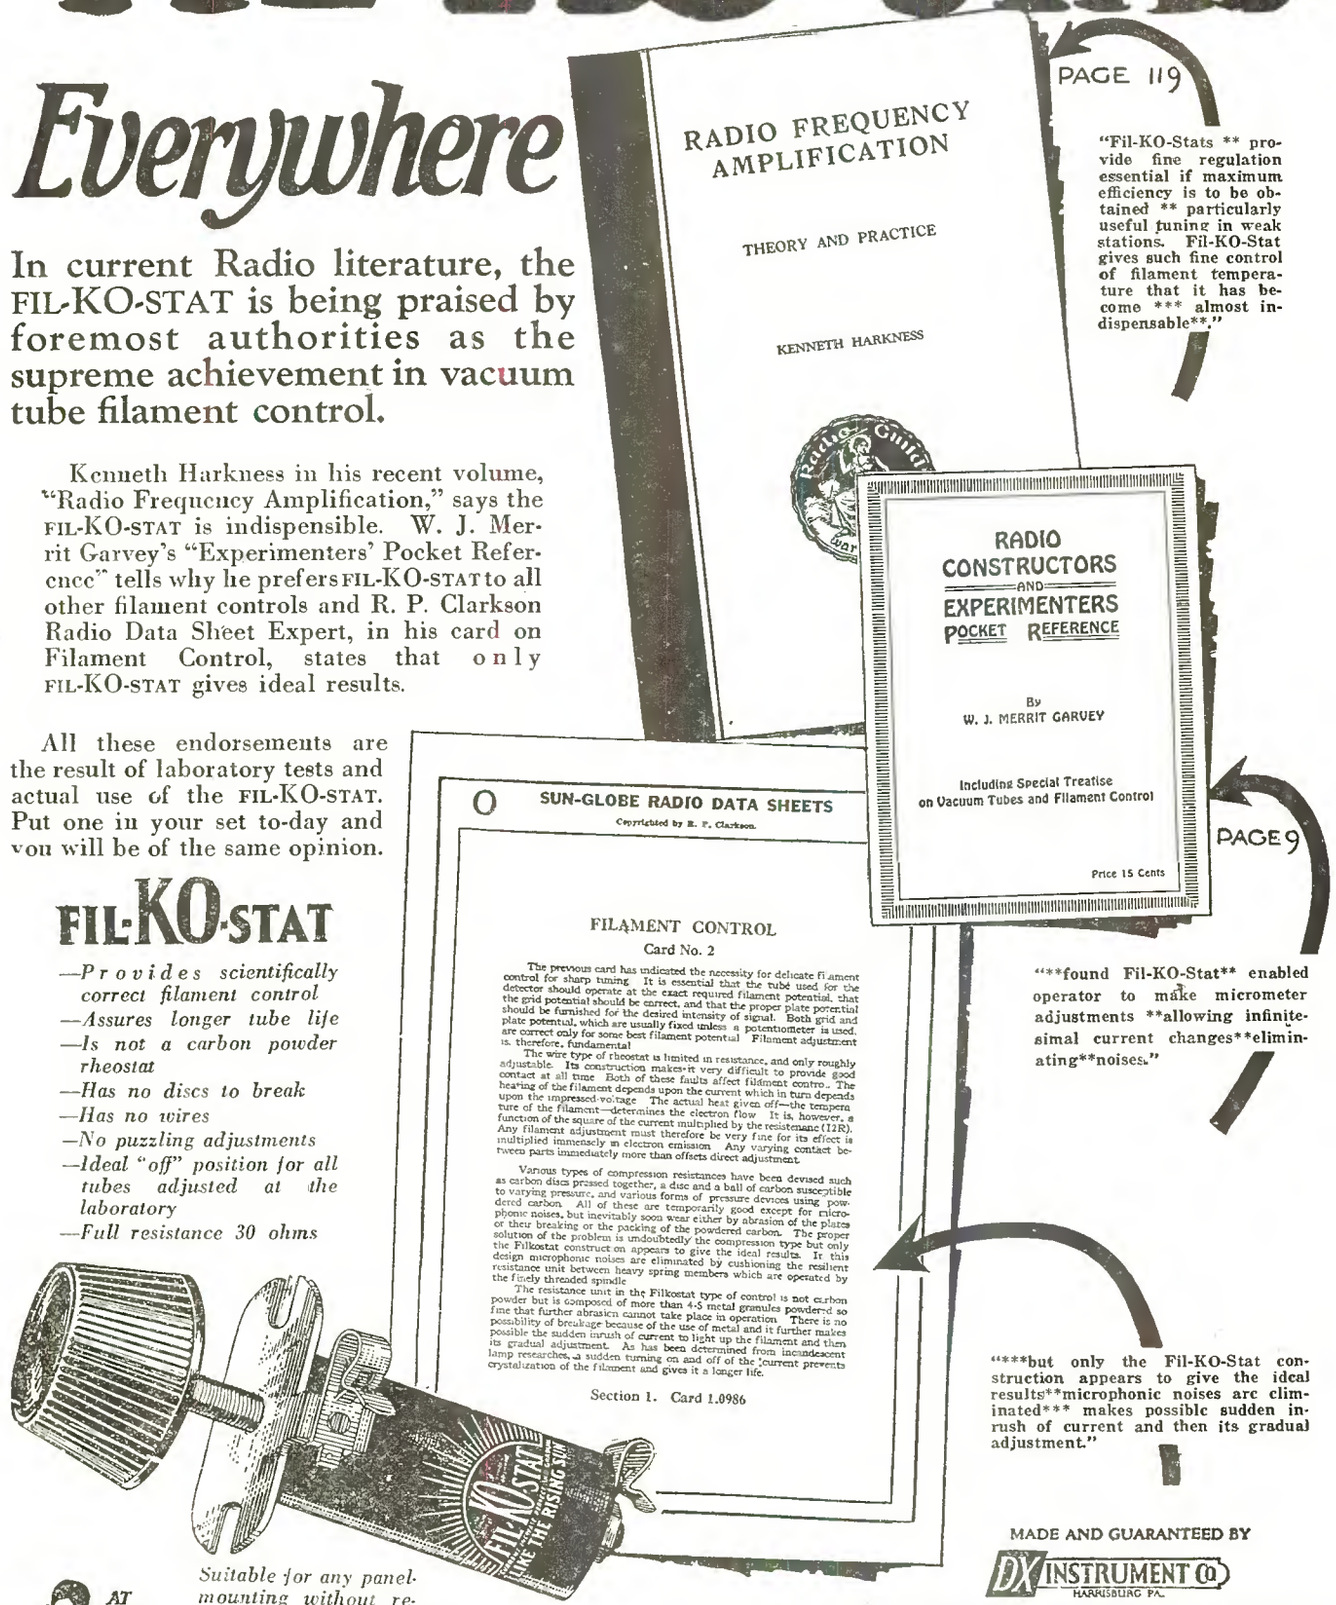
Everywhere

In current Radio literature, the FIL-KO-STAT is being praised by foremost authorities as the supreme achievement in vacuum tube filament control.

Kenneth Harkness in his recent volume, "Radio Frequency Amplification," says the FIL-KO-STAT is indispensible. W. J. Merrit Garvey's "Experimenters' Pocket Reference" tells why he prefers FIL-KO-STAT to all other filament controls and R. P. Clarkson Radio Data Sheet Expert, in his card on Filament Control, states that only FIL-KO-STAT gives ideal results.

All these endorsements are the result of laboratory tests and actual use of the FIL-KO-STAT. Put one in your set to-day and you will be of the same opinion.



FIL-KO-STAT

—Provides scientifically correct filament control
—Assures longer tube life
—Is not a carbon powder rheostat
—Has no discs to break
—Has no wires
—No puzzling adjustments
—Ideal "off" position for all tubes adjusted at the laboratory
—Full resistance 30 ohms

Suitable for any panel-mounting without re-drilling. Equipped with Fahnestock clips. Heavy nickel plated drilled and tapped mountings for rigidly setting up FIL-KO-STAT on table or board—15 cents.

YOUR POTENTIOMETER SHOULD BE NON-INDUCTIVE

Induction interferes with and chokes the free passage of the delicate high frequency currents. You can't get the best results unless you get rid of this induction.

C R L Potentiometers are absolutely non-inductive,—the resistor is not wire but a strip of graphite protected against wear by a disc over which the shoe passes. Adjustment is noiseless through an infinite number of steps.

The Non-Inductive C R L makes possible the proper biasing of the radio frequency amplifying tubes to insure the best results.

USE A GRID LEAK THAT HELPS YOUR SET

The wide unbroken range of adjustment through 900 degrees—2½ turns of the knob provides maximum sensitivity and allows you to accurately secure the exact resistance value you desire in your detector tube circuit.

The resistance value remains where set until the knob is again turned. Adjustment is secured not by rubbing but by the change in area of contact between the graphite impregnated fabric strip and the spring plate.

Adjustment is therefore stepless and noiseless over the complete range from ¼ to 8 megohms.

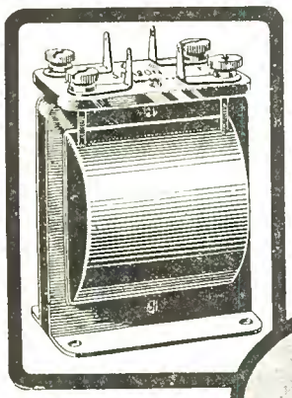
IMPROVED IN DESIGN



Reduced in Price

Samson
HW-A2
AUDIO FREQUENCY
Transformer

In six short months the SAMSON won first place among audio frequency transformers. Samson Helical Wound Coils gave to Samson Transformers the highest possible efficiency by reducing the distributed capacity to an absolute minimum, practically eliminating distortion and increasing the amplification 40%.

Leaping sales permitted a reduction in price from $7 to $5, the same as ordinary transformers.

Now comes a NEW DESIGN, the Samson HW-A2 Transformer. Exactly the same in efficiency as the HW-A1 which proved Samson Transformer superiority, the new model occupies 30% less space, has special soldering clips, standard terminal markings, drawn metal case and slotted terminal screws for quicker, more convenient connections.

Samson HW-A2 Audio Frequency Transformers will help your set receive at its best. Get them at dealers; or if yours doesn't carry them, direct from us on receipt of price. Write for Bulletin B26 proving Samson's superiority.

Helical Winding Samson's Secret

Only Samson Transformers have or can have coils with the wire wound in disc shaped layers. These give to Samson Transformers greater efficiency. One stage of amplification with a Samson Helical Wound Transformer often proves far more satisfactory than two stages of some and better than three stages of other transformers.
